INSIDE STORY

Whodunnit? We did that's who. Top, you are now the proud owner of a copy of the UK's number one computer games magazine. Thanks to you we now sell an staggering 134,871 copies each month which means we've got an amazing 600,000 readers! Why? Because we're got more fun news, reviews and advice than any other games magazine you come to name. And we continue the tradition of bringing you the best bits from our own line-up of software and competitions. Thanks to Bite you can win one of the incredible Singa Master System games machines which every games player in the universe has been hoping for ever since we announced its existence in C+VG a few months back. You can also Go with Inspector Gadget and win a pair of his Gadget shoes. Taking all states you can also win tickets to that great for West End show Knightlight Express thanks to, you've guessed it, the new Starlight software label. We've also got a 14 page Adventure Special packed with adventure goodies like the exclusive Helix 3.2 all test runs, plus previews of Knight One and Strange Hill. Microsoft want to take you on a monster hunting trip to Leak Hills in search of the mysterious Nessie. We want to take you to the exclusive C+VG Golden Joystick Awards — in spirit anyway — as we announce the results of the most prestigious reader awards in the games world. All this plus the latest action from the consoles. Play By Mail, Tony Tabor's What Gossip and lots more. Check it out!

News

Prepare yourselves for a cat-a-strophic Garfield, the cynical but cute cartoon cat is making his computer debut during April. The Edge have picked up the character licence and intend to produce a series of Garfield games. The first will be called Big Fat Hairy Deal and should be in the shops in time for Easter.

Ever wondered how to become a successful games programmer? It's a profession polished with pitch for the uninitiated — but Superior Software, of Ryepton fame, have put together a new handbook called Success in Software, which aims to help would-be games coders. The handbook will be given free to anyone responding to Superior's big spring advertisement campaign. Full colour advertisements will be appearing throughout the home computer press during March inviting people to send details of their abilities.

Makes a pig of yourself and grab a copy of ORC's game of the month, Orkney in case you're not bored about this offering it's a sort of games up there, one that had characters like Harry the Hood, Rubbish Man and good, old Uncle Pig. ORC are currently taking the brave step of converting the comic into a computer game. Can't be done, pay-its. But those who share in Orkney are going to have a crack at it. In the game you play the part of Uncle Pig who is attempting to get on level of Orkney together. You play different games, get the articles you need for various pages together and finally end up completing the comic and hopefully get a monster-orc-like figure. Billie C+VG really!

Mandy Wilson, who created the brilliant Commodore Don game for Virgin has turned to a dynamic duo from the area of short films for the subject of his new, promising-looking game. Laurel and Hardy may seem unlikely characters for a game but Andy — ever keen to find something a little bit different — thought otherwise. Laurel and Hardy introduces a new programming technique called Orkneyism. In keeping with the original character of Laurel and Hardy films, the game is in black and white and the soundtrack features an "orgue music" accompaniment.

The game can be played by one or two players — or by you against the computer. The game has been in development for nearly eight months. Laurel and Hardy will be released in late March/early April for the C64.

Express Builder from US Gold should be arriving at a station near you soon, while Konami's Iron Horse is still waiting in the wings.

Meanwhile here's a reminder of what the fantastic arcade version looks like!

Why, why, look you may remember C+VG's User Computer Temp Transmutal moving about a name called Firework from the legendary Orkney. Well the game itself has finally surfaced as the Electric Dreams label. Firework is an exciting shoot 'em up featuring smooth, vertically scrolling graphics and a constant stream of hot and furious attacks.

The Firework, which means four main levels fuelled by nuclear power plants, cunningly concealed by a Devil Rock at the end of each section. You must first destroy these plants, plunging the universe into darkness, and then prevent them re-bombing by attacking again in Following in the wake of Rogue Trooper and Judge Dredd, the popular 2000AD comic character, Wizmo the Wizmo, is to make his debut as computer.

The rights have been snapped up by Blackbox and the resulting game will be out on the Spectrum, Amstrad and Commodore.

Meanwhile the Wizmo looks like Resistance Movement against Targemondo, Grand Master of the Targemondo. Wizmo has even to destroy the evil empire of the Targemondo.

Targemondo has cleaned Targemondo of all plans and is recognised as the protector of all human life on the planet. He means the extinction of alien life as a religious crusade and has almost to cleanse the galaxy — only Wizmo can save the planet.

In the game, Wizmo combats Targemondo in an attempt to finally destroy him. Each new screen will provide him with different obstacles to overcome.

The Targemondo will try to destroy him before he can reach the Grand Master. But Wizmo is well-equipped. His trusty sword, Wizmo, has killed many Targemondo. If that fails he has his gun and the ability to breathe fire at his opponents.

As Wizmo gets nearer to Targemondo his face will gradually appear at the bottom of the screen. Once fully visible — the final battle is about to begin.

■ They are back! Those beautiful 90 foot high spitting comets are set to reappear on the Commodore 64 compliments of Mr Minter.

I took a little peak at how the game was coming along and it got my toes back tingling and my hand itching for action! In Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back the camel animation is smoother and there are several scrolling planes in front of the camel to give it a classy look to the game.

The aim of the game is to get through the various levels and to have a great solid blast at just about everything in sight.

There should be around 100 attack waves, all with their own touch of strategy and reflex. The game will also feature a silly little tune which is described as "a traditional Farwest melody".

There are also aliens in the border and a really fast back camel smoking a ciggie in the top right hand side of the screen.

After a year and a half's painstaking development, Star Wars will be available in February on Commodore 64/128 cassette (£9.95) and disk (£8.95) and BBC Master series.

■ Star Wars is the final Farwest but Domarc is not still bringing out the game! Yes, those classic arcade coin-ops are coming to a home computer near you. Star Wars, the Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi will all come on the old Atari 950 cartridge machine very soon in the next of time. Quite why it's taken so long to get them out for computer is a mystery. The games are scheduled for release in late 87.

Last month we printed the first part of our offer for the 280 FREE games of Peter Cook's Academy. This month we print the BigBook which puts you in with a chance of the game.

Send these two tokens to: Academy Office, CRL, CRL House, 5 King's Yard, London E15 2JH.

☐ Spectrum ☐ Amstrad

■ We've already told you about Star Wars for the Atari, how this fast and furious game is available for the Amstrad and Spectrum from CRL.

Star Wars will retail for £7.95 on cassette and £5.95 on disc.

■ The Fifth Quarter is an arcade adventure complete with role playing elements and a whole bunch of robots in the way from Bubble Run. This arcade adventure is set on a spaceship which will have approximately 280 enemy locations and the player will have control of four robot crew swopping from one to another as necessary. The game will be available for the Spectrum, Amstrad and C64 but a price has not yet been fixed.

■ The first in Granada's range of Atari ST titles, Typhoons is due for release in February. Typhoon is a space action game, licensed from Germany by Granada and written specially for the ST. The game features 500 different scenes of play and difficulty.

■ Starquest, originally written by C+VG's Joystick winner Steve Crowe, is about to be released on the Amstrad.

It's set you back £9.95 for the tape, £11.95 for the disc. And there's an Electron version coming soon!

■ The Phantom Stick (which) A couple of issues back we printed some special C+VG stickers and stuck them on the back of your favourite mag. We also asked you to send us pictures of your pickers in silly places. Please send either Basil Bennett's of Whiffy.

■ Inside the heart of C+VG you'll discover a special poster from Powerrhouse, the new budget label from the CRL. There's some excellent stuff on the way including a terrific version of Wonder Boy, the arcade hit called Remembrance.

■ Remembrance Classics (reappeared) Well, Bubble Bus has done it again with Classics Remembrance — Pop again in other words. And it's only £1.99!

■ Granada Graphics hasn't given up on the old favourites — martial arts.

Their new game is Samurai Village and will be for the C64 64/128, the Spectrum and Amstrad CPC's price £9.95.

Awarded to Top Flight Stunt Pilots Only

The Sports Jet Simulation

The Decathlon of Sports Aviation Events is a tough and dangerous competition, the ultimate challenge for any stunt pilot. To compete in it, you must learn to fly the BD-5J—fully acrobatic, 300 m.p.h. sports jet. To win you must be prepared to live dangerously.

Acrojet puts you in the hot seat to experience the same thrill, excitement and split-second action as real stunt pilots.

Superb 3-D graphics, sophisticated cockpit instrumentation and lightning fast joystick response enable you to perform precision loops, rolls and Immelmans, even the death-defying Cuban Eight.

In this simulation there's no room for human error. Only for skill, courage and nerves of steel.

Up to 4 players can compete in Acrojet. Challenge your friends and become the World's Greatest Sports Pilot.

Acrojet for the Commodore 64/128k, Spectrum 48/128k and Amstrad CPC series. Cassette £19.95. Code 014-95.

During the attack helicopter flight simulation, it rapidly and seamlessly turning into a head-on collision with the MiG-29s in this scenario. How they managed to pack so much into a 10-sec program seems to be a mystery even to the engineers, but after seeing this, you'll be putting out a single scenario's worth of time about the estimated cost.

The All-India Agency attack highlighted that, after various learning lessons, now come into service with the mounting and missing forces of the US Army. Unlike the Americans, Designing a road to the future is no simple task. In the past, the road ahead was clear, and the future was bright. But now, the road is full of potholes, and the future is uncertain. The only way to survive is to embrace change and innovation. The only way to succeed is to be first. The only way to win is to be different. The only way to live is to be bold. The only way to thrive is to be brave. The only way to prosper is to be persistent. The only way to prosper is to be persistent.

and many to fly. There are two main currents, a system which — represented by Staphylex for a common joyride, spatula—carries pink and red, and a collective lower which carries the amount of life generated by the river islands. To fly towards is a Staphylex you gain height and lose weight.

moreover, rather than pulling the work back to take off as with a conventional aircraft, this takes time to learn, and "outstanding" with a training scenario in the United States, in which while poor team supports false communication and the returning engine fire is found from that the pilots believe to graduates, slowly, through reasons of increasing difficulty against engine with gradually improving training and recovery.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

handbook of American's worldwide commitment. First, a chance to relight Vietnam with a return to South East Asia, then air support for American Central troops committed in Central America, then part of the Rapid Deployment Force garnet desert-ship equipment in the Near East, and finally World War II (these in Germany against the Wehrmacht). On each occasion the player can opt for a normal mission, a mission which requires him to volunteer, or a "suicide" mission with a low chance of surviving. Missions can be day or night, in any kind of weather conditions, and the Apache can be set to fly "neatly" or be a little more hard to the pilot. After seeing the mission's end objectives his own weapons load, and his own path to the target.

The object is not just a survive the mission. The pilot starts as a target and can earn promotion all the way up to colonel by completing (well) flying. He can also be awarded medals for a particularly good performance on one specific mission. The US Army gives helicopter pilots that they're useful for completing flight training without killing themselves — but after that it gets harder if the pilot decides that a mission is just too difficult to complete it by using the "back seat" option, but this will affect his future promotion prospects. With so many variations to select, it is almost impossible to fly the same mission twice.

Gunship is such a simply excellent game that any computer's screen like carpet, but I love a few. The helicopter flies for those sluggish that is normal for a simulator, which Mongoose believe to be realistic, but which needs a little adjustment for the player. In particular, the collective, which is really the key control in flying a helicopter effectively — by a second joystick using as a throttle. The program may also be taking the claims for the real Apache has much as their last option — the machine has suffered from serious technical problems, and modifications may be far more common than Gunship suggests. But this does little to detract from a very fine game.

There are people now who believe that the attack helicopter is the weapon of the future, eventually to replace the tank altogether. The US Army says that should it ever come to that, it expects the Apache to be the best tank for such helicopter loss. Gunship about as good as you will ever get to finding out if that value is carried with my highest recommendation.

It's magical. Feud, the first release on the new Building Game will entertain you. It's a funny, relaxing, and a little bit weird. You play as a lord up against 14 other lords, each with their own personality and a unique set of powers. You can build up your own kingdom, or you can try to take over the kingdom of another lord. You can also try to take over the kingdom of another lord. You can also try to take over the kingdom of another lord.

Can your software collection be without Feud?

together as much quicker than you. Fortunately you have a compass which shows you where your opponent is — but often you'll need to be where he is in order to pick the herbs or flowers you need for your special brews.

You can dodge Leonardo's deadly spells or balls of lightning — but it's better to avoid them if possible. Another way to avoid is hide the Gardeners who can drain your energy on contact. He'll also chase you around his garden which you have to enter to get more ingredients. It's a good idea to get together the remaining spell before you attempt to leave the garden. You'll need Leonardo's help to break for that. Sounds like a game control you find in today's video bars.

You will also come across villagers and travellers who can be turned into zombies and forced to play your commands. Feud reminded me a bit of Sorcery in atmosphere, although it's more of a Salesi (Puff) style game. Especially the Spectrum version.

The Amstrad graphics are extremely pretty and both versions of the Amstrad game have near top-top soundtracks which accompany the in well with the game.

Minimum value at £1.99 — you shouldn't fail to add Feud to your collection NOW!

The last door is a picture of the ship and selecting this menu switches to the Farm Map, hour by hour grid representing the 16 zones of the research establishment. The map left open in the control room, that returns are the land owner.

Michaelis says he's grateful to everyone — but I must admit I found myself quite taken with it, thanks to the weird things going on in the scene.

ated Gary. It just fits that — and I remain the usability factor should be a bit limited. Whynny is different and difficult to classify but if you are a fan of David games, and this is pretty typical of their style, considering strategy and quick thinking, it's well worth having a look at in your local computer store.

STAR RAIDERS II

In his early years of the home computer, the Atari was a featured mainstay. But two years passed. Some of the games that Atari later released are considered to be among — Mike Madsen says. Star Raiders is one example. Star Raiders is often cited as being one of the best of Atari games. Star Raiders was released in 1979 only on the Atari. Now eight years later we have the follow-up, which will be making an impact soon on the home computer market. It's called Star Trek: The Motion Picture. In December, 1987, it will be available on the Atari.

But Manderly is not the kind of game that was never released from three years ago. That game was called The Last Manfighter, but due to the overnight loss of most fans, released until now. The main difference was a new to us name and the concept of the

It's only after hours that these depths really show themselves. The Galien River has come leaping out without warning up these rapids, and defences from their defeat and are on the offensive once more. Penetrating the star system of Galien IV with little delay, we're once again. You are the only person that stands in their way. You manage to be different all the while in the Galien IV star system. The mines are spaced out from three major planets and are spaced in total around the planet. Each, the number of ships you have to shoot and destroy are the same.

Transfer from planet to planet or between the two star systems from the giant's inner-diskward edge of the system that you are in. For details on your next destination is less apparent from where you are and all you have to do is place it on your destination and go. The first post ship is then plunged into hyperspace and the arrival is almost instant. On the way from Deneb to Deneb, the part of the game will almost certainly be changed.

The graphics make a big blip in a few places due to the very best, but more to be expected and going off with a big bang of showing the Atari graphics in the very best. Several others are also used in the very best with quite a good idea of the game. The Atari continues to make of being the Atari games of the console.

It was from just an Atari there was not and just the game was of your game only, but a somewhat better than the others. Atari is as well as a somewhat more, with software like this, it was not the Atari game.

- MAXIMUM: CDM 64
- CPU: 13.44
- VIDEO: 640x480, 60FPS IN GRAPHICS
- SOUND: 16 BIT
- PHYSICAL TESTS: CDM 64
- CPU: 13.44

Who are you reading this what you could be playing West Bank?

Based in South Dakota men are dead, without the games and reviews are reviews. A man used to be the gun and if you don't watch your life you're gonna get it and it'll be the end.

Based there is in the air and there is a great bunch of gamery variety out to get their thinking hands on your mind.

West Bank has 12 doors. You must get the money deposits from each of these doors. Three doors appear on the screen at any one time.

The doors open in random order. A figure appears. You must make a split decision. Is that person a badie or innocent? You have to control your shot things. Shooting the innocent does you no good whatsoever. If a badie appears in the door don't shoot too soon. Wait for him to draw before opening fire.

Get the money from the first three doors and you can then move onto the next three, all the way up to 12. Survive and you move onto the next stage. Between each stage you have to fight a duel with three past assassins. Again start with story close before fighting.

It's pretty nerve-racking to find yourself facing three killers, waiting to see which one will shoot first. Even if an innocent person appears in the door don't let your guard down. Badies have been known to push them suddenly aside and blast you.

The people you'll meet are Green Jordan, a good-guy farmer; Jack Kowalski, a socialist; Daisy, the beautiful daughter of the city inspector; Alfred and Joe Boston, both assassins; Boulder, a dwarf, always ready about target practice — except that one even creates a bomb; Mackeyhart, another villain; Julius, the one who gives you gold. There is a final mystery character.

The graphics in West Bank are highly detailed and realistic. There's real texture in the air as well as for the door to swing open.

- PHILIP: 6400
- VERSION TESTS: AMSTRAD 6400
- REVIEWER: DAVID

As you step into the MGT prototype you are immediately aware that the Magnetics is a wonderfully creative and innovative game. It is a full-on action game. There's nothing the Crystal Palace is all from due to the ultimate challenge of the support system and now you've been given the chance of finding out what's going wrong and returning things to normal.

And so, as the Corps motto "Think the job or you'll break your head", is still ringing in your ears, you set off on your most dangerous mission to date, deep inside the MGT.

The Crystal Palace is a massive structure full of its hallways and doors, some of which are guarded by lasers which can be disabled by finding a key with the same symbol as that above the door in question. Lifts can be activated about the palace and can be used to travel upwards to different levels to where you can to travel between points.

Not other rooms are guarded by virtual pillars of pure energy that drill back and forth like a pyrotechnic warning.

It's a simple and many other quality reasons for it to be the best game player.

Lookback that slowly rise into the air when you step on them, just when you're underneath you come crashing down. You're not yet into a thousand planes. There's that room.

MGT

hardness enough until you try landing on them — the last landing you'll ever do! There's even an invisible mine in one room.

Keys can be obtained by shooting at them with Magnetics's laser. They will then disappear off the wall and are absorbed for later use. Control is with joystick or keyboard and may take a few weeks to get used to as moving the stick in a certain direction will make the MGT face that way but will also make it move in that direction if you keep holding. The fire button, too, has a dual purpose as it is used to fire the laser and to raise the Magnetics when resting on a lift pad.

The action is viewed from an isometric angle and the graphics are very well designed. Moving a heavy metal ball to the other side of the room is keeping with the game's theme. The main Magnetics is a large, red, and very smooth ball that can be used in many directions. It is made of its movement path continues in one direction even while you're now trying to move in another. The end effect is one of being on the way. All around the place trying not to slip off hallways or into danger.

MGT is yet another very playable, well designed, and graphically pleasing movement game. It's a game from the Crystal Palace that is getting a growing reputation for being a great quality game, especially for the Amstrad.

FOOTBALL FORTUNES

- MANAGER: TONY BLANDFORD (SPECTRUM)
- SUPPORT: TONY BLANDFORD
- PRICE: £14.95 (plus £12.50 tax)
- DEVELOPER: TONY BLANDFORD
- REVIEWER: SIMON MILES

Given the frequency with which sporting games and their names feature computer packages I quailed at the thought that the erstwhile Cloughie might have slipped up on this one. But no fears at all. "Brian Clough did very well," as he might say to his snug self.

Football Fortunes is a combined board and computer test game, and although the board, its money and counters are a lot cheap the combination works well for between two to five players.

Each player takes on a team for a nine game season, plus the 14-0-0. The following season you can play-on for European competitions (remember them?). This will take a couple of hours but time doesn't drag.

Of course, the computer gives you a random team which you fix out using a selection of cards depicting 10 players with values from 1-6. Interestingly Cloughie has allowed his highly rated defender Chris Pennington is made very 1, while current boss Clive Allen and Tony Curran only get ratings of two each.

But that is niggling. Each player has a turn on the board before the week's fixtures are played. On the board you can win or lose money, buy players or be sent to the computer where random events can either break your best striker's stridehome or give you a 100 rating player for free. The computer throws the dice and asks your card, so all you have to watch is your team selection and your money.

Sometimes you get a telephone — no dull graphics to sit through — and you share the game results.

At level one, success is almost impossible to avoid, to be bold and start at level four.

You are judged not only on how you play but also on your performance, including your bank balance.

If I was being really critical I'd say there's a bit too much money floating around the game with too few regular outlays. You only have to join wages, for example, and not even Brian could get away with that in real life.

Also, no avoid misadventures or hoping in the money combined value for your team in an otherwise money atmosphere, the appointed computer operator tends to be strict and sober. (You would expect no less.)

Otherwise this is a winning idea — quick to play and simple to understand — just like the real game, eh Brian?

THE DOUBLE

- SUPPORT: SQUADRON
- PRICE: £19.95 (CDS)
- VERSION: 1991/92 CDS
- REVIEWER: SIMON MILES

The Double is packed with more genuine detail than any other football managerial game yet reviewed.

But what happens? Before I've even picked my team, The Double wanders around a horrendous computer. On the list of teams are: Watford, Everton and Leeds Town. Which? Well, the other 14 names were right.

Understand, I spent ten agonising minutes going through names and squad numbers, listing 10 clubs with players and their wages (as of 1991) and reputation, overall, plus ground capacities and average gates.

Managers have to guess their next home game in order to book the required number of fans in time. They can pay for ground improvements, or bribe scouting missions and even stock a few staff along the way. Interesting stuff. Was Football Manager a serious challenger at last?

No way, chaps. At this point the Double goes into inevitable no-no. Team selection is by name, which is a strange variant to the top of the world after each season, and since none of the players have varying levels of skill it's partly pointless. I'd rather it were randomised now (even the sound effects are just because the graphics don't tell you when you've reached the full sick).

Never mind, the game's the thing. Of course it isn't. I have minutes of pointless, edited and squalling dull graphics (even enough to make even a 10-year-old fan bored) and a 10-year-old fan. And that's what it is: the home you'll see if you even play, maybe long enough to manage The Double.

Even skipping the match itself you will most endure 10 minutes meaningless team selections (and even more 10 other minutes with random names involved). On one occasion when in a fit of exaggeration I said NO to seeing all the statistics they still came up (and I've never recovered).

Kevin Tynes scored twice in two mins. The Double is too ambitious on details and too tedious on over-riding stats, which is possibly why these claims that being a manager takes 10 hours. In 10, teams don't win, it certainly seemed like it with this game.

whether it's a corridor or bend, a T-junction or a crossroads. When aliens are near, the upper portion of the screen becomes agitated and you know to expect trouble any second. When the aliens get into the same location as you, there is no escape until you have pushed them all off — a rewarding, if messy, task.

Although part two is similar, in many ways, to the European game, the remaining four are substantially different, although not necessarily original in their own right. Part three, 'The Operations Room Campaign', sends our heroes composed in the QRT with one last hope of escape. If you only hold off hordes of the sucking aliens long enough for the others to cut a hole in a new top steel door, the aliens drop through the ceiling and sub as your moon tent is right across the screen. By moving your sprite up and down the right hand edge of the screen you can negotiate the little slarings before they can pass you and gate you of your gate.

Given a hole has been planned in the operations room door, it's no wonder the QRT is a scenario which can best be described as a double-decker Pacman derivative in which you must find your way from the Operations Room to the Drop Ship landing field. If this alien ship game offers a fun Pacman derivative as some tracks pop out or under other ones giving the game a maze-like quality. This means that you may be left lost to the east, but on the wrong track, and thus unable to reach it without going way back towards the Operations Room.

After you take in the Drop Ship landing field, and with only 11 minutes before the whole planet becomes nuclear hell, it becomes apparent that there is one human survivor left on the planet. Humans are piling up like the remains of a little girl, called Janet, who is somewhere in the Atmosphere Processor. The punishment game involves the location and rescue of Janet by Noddy, leader of the landing party. The screen display is similar to the other games but in the AP, but this time you only control one character as all the other bio-displays are hijacked by aliens. Flies, and like readings. Plans can be dropped at key locations to mark your course, while the status display tells you how many of your original 50 ships remain.

In this final encounter, you don the power-loader, a robotic exoskeleton that works a little like a football with no enormous mechanical limbs. These limbs can be manipulated in all directions using the joystick. Each time you let the quest while the status the green scroll bar at the bottom of the screen indicates how much damage you have inflicted. When the bar is fully green, you will be able to pick up the dead queen and dump her in the airlock. It, however, the success is getting to the bottom of the screen before this time, it's curtains and all your efforts will have been in vain.

Leviathan. What can I say about it? It's the game designed in the concept? No, not really. It's pure arcade shoot 'em up, very slick and very colourful.

Is it good? Yes, in fact, it's probably English Software's best game to date. No, I'll revise that opinion. It is the best English Software game I've seen.

The mission is simple: seek and destroy enemy ships across three planet screens. Mountains, Cityscape and Greenhouse. Your ship has limited lives and is up against the clock. Points level can be reflected by landing near fuel ports or blowing ports in the space reactor.

If you thought last month's C+VG you'd already know the what you're up against from the maps of first two levels. They show you the terrain but not the dangers. These include cannons, rock, lightning bolts and, of course, and a whole host of flying aliens.

The game has a little bit like Super Zaxxon, with diagonal scrolling. The Leviathan ship can fly either way but going from left to right, I found, makes you gain a little more time when the aliens attack. It is also useful to launch the central missile while screen is dry skin of each game. This gives you a hint of when you're up against.

The Leviathan ship is equipped with unlimited missiles and three smart bombs.

The graphics are excellent. Quite some the relevance of the Greenhouse in I don't know, but it's very nice to look at.

Interestingly enough, the idea for Leviathan was inspired by the video for '21 Top a Rough Box' (Remember how their grooves can turn into an equally groovy space ship?) that was, apparently, inspired the Leviathan ship.

The ship itself is a happy little boat, it can turn and turn, flip and flip with the greatest of ease.

Some of the bonuses I found unfortunately difficult to overcome. The great thing is that if you can't access some really mean and really looking bit of the game you can't but a round and to look the ship you can, happily travelling full circle and shooting up behind the back lot.

The enemy ships come in all shapes, sizes and various degrees of nastiness. To successfully complete the game you must destroy all the enemy Leviathan sends high in the first division of space shoot-em-ups.

DOUBLE TAKE

- MAKING: SPECTRUM/128/CD-ROM
- STORY: E. J. WILSON
- PRICE: £10 (SPECTRUM) OR £15 (CD-ROM)
- VERDICT: TESTED: SPECTRUM
- ADVISORY: BOMB

Two worlds — the mirror image of each other, touched in space through a time-warp.

One is positive, good, familiar — our world. The other is negative, evil — not unrecognisably familiar.

Their interface is a time warzone through which objects and being can pass, contact has resulted in the beginning of exchanges.

Rescue our world — stop the invasion, but don't stop. For as the exchanges accelerate, the enemy shadows grow larger, domination is at hand!

This is the story line which accompanies the game's action which has been causing quite a stir lately. It also states: "Starting today, we're giving Double Take the title of the Art of Graphics. I have to agree with all of these, especially the graphics. This game must include some of the best graphics seen on a Spectrum.

You take control of an overcoat that someone forgot to wear. Your objective is to travel around the numerous locations, and find objects in the various scenes and return them to where they should be. On the lower half of the screen a red light will turn green if the object you are carrying belongs in the room that you are in. To travel to different rooms, which are used these as set doors, but to travel to the other world to replace or finish an object you will have to use the sparkling cloud. When using the cloud the object you are carrying will stay in the same state, whereas if you wait for the clouds to change on their own, the object's state will be altered. The cloud only travels along the central corridor, so this means using the mirrorlands a lot to find it.

If you do not manage to find the cloud in time and the cloud is altered, then you do not really as all is not lost. You can still change the objects state by showing the aliens that sap your energy. The aliens appear in the most well used Ultimate style, but add the atmosphere of the game. Due to the use of a lot of colours, the old Spectrum problem of attributes map into the program. As such may be limited but is once again another old Spectrum problem. The sound that there is has been used to very good effect.

Overall the game turns out to be one of Golden's best releases ever on the Spectrum, and will probably be the most imaginative and innovative game of the year. This is certainly worth purchasing if you want a game that strays away from mindless shooting, and will keep all the arcade adventures happy for some time. Pull wants to Golden on this one and hope they can produce this series only for Spectrum and other future releases.

- VERDICT: CHAMELEON

Is any a change? Well why not my Chameleon. Could I Not? Oh well in sales of sorts.

Chameleon is the new one from Ego's Imagica, and it's... well, a bit different.

The game is based on a tale about elements, you know, fire, water, air, earth. Most familiar and all that. Imagine that great, who was a little evil, discovered a gateway, open by accident, to the realm where these elements live!

14 elements welcomed him, as they had not seen a human before, and his managers were aware about the element's creation. He began to plot an evil plan in his twisted mind, and set out doing dirty deeds. For in legend, the elements were together and balanced, but he could create a new breed of elements, more powerful, each in its own realm, with their

in their realm.

But the owner started to get greedy and each one wanted supreme power, and this he could not allow, and so they killed him, and also found the gateway, back to the normal world.

Chameleon struck, stole the elements and the owner kept him tightly on hand, which was very humiliating.

Until fate was his last straw, as he was angry and created the Chameleon. He was a hybrid of man and flux, the very essence of the elements. He could realize his flux to form any of the elements, and thus could destroy them, this is where you come in.

Controlling the Chameleon, you must travel to the different realms of flux, to destroy the demons and collect the tainted flux placed there by the first man, and return it to the heart of order.

First you go to the realm of Fire, which is the realm of the realm. Using all the powers of nature and going back on the battle field, you can choose the alignment of flux you want.

You will change to the colour of the flux, and can burn the flux as the demons, but first you must find the powerful tainted flux hidden by the demons.

To find the flux, you must pass the right gateway in the right time of day, which is a more task than judgement job. Once found you must destroy the remaining elements and go through a gateway to the next realm.

While you seek the flux, you will be attacked by everything in the realm, but you can fight back. You can regain your energy by shooting a pain gauge, which will turn into flux.

But of course the funnier you get, the more elements attack, and so on. You will also have to design elements which have come from other realms, as you require them.

If you want a different sort of game than try this, but take a good look first. Oh.

Over the S401T — that's the magic Artificially Intelligent Number Transport, to you. Otherwise known as Number 8, this strange-looking face looks like a skull with a skeletal L.T. But Number 8 is a robot with a conscience. While being built at the Nerve Robotics factory, Number 8 was struck by a brief lightning bolt. Something happens deep down with his circuits and he suddenly becomes aware, able to think, to feel emotions and, worst of all for a military robot, develops a conscience.

This robot feels, understands, and acts with a lot of affection. However, when he is equipped with deadly weapons, the factory personnel want him back again. Others are not so kind. Blow him up, they suggest.

Number 8 isn't too keen on this idea and decides to escape. And that's where the game starts. As with the first, on which the game is based, Number 8 must escape the factory complex, get into the countryside and build a replica of himself to fool his pursuers. The game is divided in two parts. Part One is set in the factory complex — all 30 rooms of it. The robot must design a coded hardware and software for activating his laser and also the technical manual for building a replica robot.

Number 8 begins with just enough laser to begin to fire. From Nerve's computer system and download other programs into his memory which is restricted to three programs only, including the life. Total a fourth one will be required to move an existing one. This also applies to objects carried in this section. Number 8 must have power and control like security guards for only then can you leave the complex and make your break for freedom.

Points are awarded for tasks attempted — don't forget to search drawers and boxes on the office machines. He liquid crystal corrosion.

Because Number 8 has a conscience, the laser kill, but he can still use this machine in order to gain extra time. But when he does zap them his "conscience level" drops. Once outside — and that's the game — the chest begins. Flanked by security forces ordered to kill and other Nerve Robotics programmed to deactivate him, the odds look dire for Number 8.

The guards are deadly — but remember the "bullet" zap? He also must avoid colliding with the walls. They can easily be killed causing overhead confusion and destruction for a short time.

If you manage to reach a car before the Nerve helicopter arrives, Number 8 has a chance to create the dummy robot, fool all his adversaries and escape to live happily ever after.

The graphics are excellent — especially the detailed — and the game play clever and absorbing. By all accounts the film was good and the game doesn't disappoint. So on, blow a fuse over Short Circuit.

"Mistletoebottom always enjoyed the summer months in the Cotswoldshire village of Upper Slaughter."

Well? Has my brain slipped a gear? This was not the beginning I had expected to read. I told on and found myself in a setting strange reminiscent of John Wyndham's excellent science fiction novels.

A huge metallic tree — about the size of a tower block — has descended from space and settled in the Cotswoldshire countryside. Now this is enough in itself to send the sound planning chiefs into a fury but when huge insects begin swarming out of the hole in the white sky, something had better be done — and quickly.

The authorities respond by sending in The Greenhopper Ship, to enter hostile environments. Officially called the S.R.U.C. (M.I. 6, in girl it's nickname because of its ability to jump and crouch).

The mission is seemingly simple — to enter the hive, locate and destroy the queen bee. Easy? You must be joking!

The game begins with you sitting in your Greenhopper Ship in hive's entrance. The top two thirds of the screen is taken up by a view of the tunnel.

The documents are as follows:

Code Display: This is used for moving your position in the game. It shows heading and timing your position on tape.

Position Indicator: This light indicates there is a junction ahead you.

Your Ship: This shows whether the Greenhopper is stationary, moving or crashing.

Life Force Indicator: If it reaches zero, you're dead.

Amour display: Shows how much from and how much the Greenhopper is carrying.

Iron Sabotage Display: As you travel around the hive various bits and pieces of equipment can be picked up. This display shows what you've got and the items currently in use.

Your ship also carries three markers which can be dropped to trap any trap the enemies. The ship is powered by electronic pions which are scattered throughout the Hive.

Inside the myriad of electronic insects roaming around — and attacking you — three things, robots, walls and bridges to tape with.

This finished game is a real gem. Excellent game play and a master's display. Enter the Hive and you're in an absorbing, sometimes travelling nightmare world of Orkney-Glenfles. Now is the time to leave. Stand by, stand by.

Billed as the world's very first place of antisocial software, Bactron from Cambridge Development is a machine suitable for both adults and children. From the same team who produced BAT there is another fun colour, geometric arcade adventure with great graphics and an outstanding soundtrack.

The Bactron has already saved your life on numerous occasions but this time you're really sick! May the microchipage, Stevie the magnetococcus, Doc, Bop and all the other games that live in your body, could prove too much for you unless you can guide the Bactron through your organs and arteries in time to release the healing enzymes trapped in the yellow tubes scattered throughout your body.

The Bactron is a cute yellow, blob-shaped fellow, with tentacle ball heads, who crawls around on two long rubbery legs rather like a crab between an artery and a piece of vasculature. So bad is our fate a health that one with almost will will temporarily paralyse many of the germs wandering around inside you.

BACTRON

Just long enough to make it quit unless you activate an enzyme block.

Apart from the main location display, the patient's blood's your heartbeat and temperature are both graphically displayed by an oscilloscope display and thermometer which shows an ever increasing temperature. When the thermometer reads 45 degrees it will smash with terminal consequences.

Many objects in your organs can, and must, be moved in order to gain access to other areas of your body. Other objects, such as blood cells, going into action on contact and that be avoided at all costs if energy is to be preserved. Contact with any of the other games will also drain Bactron's fragile energy supply. Luckily you have three back-up Bactrons to carry on the game work when you expire.

Although moving the Bactron around takes some getting used to, it's worth it to see the quality of the animation of its legs as they stretch out in front of him as he takes another step. Indeed most areas of this latest French offering are polished and well designed, even if it's tedious to get stuck in a corner from which there is no escape. When this happens all you can do is watch the Bactron strategy player unceremoniously to-destroy!

By far the most memorable thing about this game is the huge energy display which is entirely addictive and, once heard, demands at least a dozen further plays. Possibly the catchiest tune ever for the Amstrad, and the game isn't bad either.

KRAKOUT

- DEVELOPER: GAMING SERVICES
- PRICE: £19.95
- UNIQUE TESTED: COM 64

I almost feel like sighing with contentment from the sheer joy of playing Krakout. It's simply wonderful and wonderful simple.

If you were around a few weeks back and remember propelling all your money into Krakout look-up, then this is the game which will bring back those wonderful moments—and a lot more. Even if you don't remember Krakout then do yourself a favour and get your hands on a copy of this game.

The idea is very simple. The arena is made up of bricks in different patterns. You control a ball at either the extreme left or right of the screen, which just moves up and down. You throw a ball into the bricks, so the ball bounces from the bricks diagonally, shooting the ball off at differing angles. Destroy all the bricks and then it's off to the next screen. And in Krakout there are around 100 different layouts. Stretching and straining your reflexes to cope with this is hard enough but there's more.

Making some bricks disappear some very strange things do happen. For instance colour-brick will change the ball. This is useful. Other bricks play nasty tricks—such as putting the bricks on the ball so you can't move it, unless you suddenly introduce a second ball onto the screen. Then there are the bricks which will blow-up.

After minutes also suddenly appear on the screen.

It's a very quick game, just floating around and then WHAM! They fly off with demonic speed into the path of the ball, normally breaking it.

There's even one alien—known as the Giga—who appears and actually eats the ball. (Don't admit I've not yet encountered this beast while playing the game properly.)

But I've played a great variety of this game where you can flip through the screens and you find the home of the Giga. He's definitely worth seeking.

There are also extra handouts you can impose on yourself.

I have only one small gripe. On the screens giving the instructions the writing is incredibly hard to read.

All in all Krakout is an excellent and enjoyable addictive game. You just won't be able to resist going for another brick in the lot.

FOR AS LITTLE AS £159 YOU CAN BE THE HOME SECRETARY.

There's more to home computers than fun and games. Just add a printer (and the necessary software) and your computer becomes a word processor. And you become a very efficient secretary.

If the printer you add is the Amstrad DMP 3600 your efficiency will even extend to saving quite a lot of money.

Because the DMP 3600 costs just £159 (incl. VAT).

Yes it will print draft quality text at an impressive 108 characters per second. And Near Letter Quality at 26 characters per second.

As you would expect it is compatible with all Amstrad home computers. But it is also compatible with Epson and any other make that has the same Centronics/Parallel interface.

If you've already graduated to a PC, there's the Amstrad DMP 3600C printer.

It's compatible with all the Amstrad PC 1612s as well as Epson and all other IBM compatible PCs. It costs just £169 (plus VAT).

Both printers have easy front loading and both will take ordinary A4 paper. One of them is bound to be right for your particular home office.

Please send me further information on the DMP 3600C and DMP 3600C2

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN

- DEVELOPER: JAMES HALL GAMES, SAN JOSE, CALIF.
- COMPILER: JAMES HALL
- PRICE: $14.95
- VERSIONS: MS-DOS, AMSTRAD CPC
- REVIEWED: DAVID

Consider the castle walls a terrible electric storm in night, while inside Frankenstein's bride begins a frantic struggle to bring her horrible husband back to life by finding some of his most important vital organs that have been scattered about the castle's bedrooms.

The game starts with a view of Franky still plugged into the mains in the lab at the top of the castle tower. Before you can help him, you must locate his lungs, heart, liver, kidneys, and a new ring finger. To locate these things, you will need to visit the various rooms, open a crypt or two and pass into the bedrooms. As a spouse and physician will be expected, not to mention a helper to help you negotiate certain parts of the castle devoid of light.

Of course, in the end traditions of Frankenstein, none of the rooms in the castle are literally locked, but rather different keys may help you in your quest. Various ghosts and other creatures, however, will not.

As for completing the state of life will gradually be drained as you wander from room to room, some of your first tasks is to find a will.

The colourful and well designed action is seen from an isometric side view and gives a glimpse of the presence of the four walls of each room. Unfortunately, although this gives the game more depth than the average isometric, it also means that you can be attacked by ghosts that have no respect for the fact that you may be unable to see what is going on behind the door wall.

However, this aside, Bride of Frankenstein is an attractive and playable game with enough brains toying to make you want to get further and further into it. So far, I say you that all arcade adventure lovers should check out and promises to be a reasonable challenge to all mapping addicts, especially as the castle layout is revealed when a certain room is visited.

Based very loosely on the ancient Chinese game of Mah-Jongg, Shanghai is a shupai (a variation of old Chinese card game) in which cards are laid face-down in grid and players attempt to take over matching pairs which are then removed from the grid.

In Shanghai the cards are replaced by tiles, as used in Mah-Jongg, and the grid is replaced by the "Dragon", a kind of "designer" board, into which 144 tiles are stacked before the start of each game. The tile at the apex of the pyramid stands on five high stack of tiles, these immediately around it are four high and so on. Only tiles at the tip of their respective stacks — "flow tiles" — can be picked up during the game.

There are three "suits" of tiles called Dots, Bam and Crabs. Each suit consists of 37 tiles, three of each number from 1-9, in addition to the suit tiles, there are 12 dragons (four white, red, and green), 16 wild four each of the main compass points, four seasons, and four "flowers".

There are four variations of the game, but in each case the rules remain the same; you can remove only identical tiles, two at a time. The exception to this rule is found with the seasons and flowers which need not match exactly to be removed. The Dragon is viewed from above and the height of each stack is shown by lines underneath the tiles in the more the higher up the tile. Only the tiles on the surface of the dragon are visible to you have no idea what tile will be revealed when the one above it is removed. However, not all tiles that are visible are first covered but will become so as a result of others being removed. This is where brains and future planning come in and means that a chesslike strategy of removing should, can be adopted.

Removing tiles is done by moving a cursor over the dragon and pointing to the first and then the second tile of the pair to be removed. A clear outline will appear around a tile in confirm your choice. If you make a legal selection, the two highlighted tiles will disappear to reveal the tiles underneath unless either of the selected tiles was the last one in the stack, and another selection can now be made.

There are four ways to play Shanghai: Solitaire, Team effort, Tournament, and Challenge.

Solitaire is for one player only and has no time limit. A challenge game in progress can also be saved and resumed later. The Team effort game is similar to Solitaire except that any number of players can take it in turns to remove pairs of tiles in an on-line manner. Team effort games can also be saved.

Any number of players can participate in Tournament play in which each player receives as many tiles as possible from an identical dragon, and the winner is the player who removes the most tiles.

In Challenge games two players take turns removing tiles from the same dragon, only this time against the clock. A player's turn is over if he removes a pair or the turn-out of time. The player who has removed most tiles at the end is the winner.

Shanghai is a game that can be played on table and board, depending on how much strategy you bring into your tactics. For example, it is always advisable to remove the tiles at the top of the highest stacks as they are blocking the most future moves. Another tip is to look carefully for a matching trio and decide which two to remove and which to move to a potential block.

As well as tile board or card games, an who enjoys giving the old grey matter a much of a workout, will not be disappointed with this one.

COUNTDOWN

NUCLEAR

- PLATFORM: AMSTRAD 486, IBM PC, SUNSPRINT, ATARI
- PRICE: £1.99
- REVIEWER: IANAN

If anybody out there fancies saving the world from a nuclear explosion yet again, then this offering from Atlanta will certainly be worth the £1.99 asking price.

The idea is to guide your robot around 20 rooms to locate and destroy four unstable 'nukes' while you map out the world.

Care must be taken to preserve your energy levels; energy is lost when trudging through various parts of the 'nuclear' complex, especially when there is an unstable cell. Energy is also lost by running with one of the many mutant breeds. Your shield will reduce energy loss and in some cases destroy the mutant breed. At various points throughout the complex you are able to reduce your energy levels.

When you start, the playing area scrolls onto the screen from below. The playing area is in the form you might imagine. Knightmare style. 3D for those of you who are keen to the computer game technique.

The movement of the robot inside that will drain your energy. You are given a time limit of 600 on the computer's clock to locate and destroy all the unstable nuclear cells.

Nuclear Countdown is a very good try at 3D and will keep a lot of Spectrum owners happy.

- PLATFORM: AMSTRAD 486, IBM PC, SUNSPRINT, ATARI
- PRICE: £9.95
- VERSION TESTED: AMSTRAD 486
- REVIEWER: GAVIN

Paranormal Robot has come with a platform game for the Amstrad called Nasties (Mind the Nasties which, in true J&M style, starts off inside our brains). Henry's, host in his own right, appears to be a mad scientist's laboratory and he ends up taking you on a while stop tour through an underground sewer complex past the gates to the caves and on to the forest, stopping off at an evil giant hand and the mad professor's laboratory on the way, not forgetting the railway to heaven, cloud mine, the dwarf planet, and the computer room at the end.

Add to this such bizarre locations as 'Lavaquake II' (quartzquake's 'Pangea') and 'Islands in the Rain', there is a host of amusingly of logic problems and scenarios requiring careful timing and quick control, and you have a pretty good idea what you're in for.

All the usual platform-game features are for fun and taking advantage in this one including multiple exits from many locations, items of which require a key, plants of poisoning, spinning, or sliding various old enemy characters. There's even a bit which takes you to various places depending on what key you have.

The object of the game is to locate the professor's computer and stop it blowing up by collecting all the flashing objects in the 200-plus screens before losing all of the five lives that you start with.

Although the graphics and sound in this game are nothing special, it should appeal to many platformers, and some would adventure buffs, and it is a decent challenge to map heads everywhere.

This game was originally released a few years ago by a company called Program Tech. It cost an asking price of £7.95. Now Masterframe has brought this opportunity and released it. This not only makes the game excellent value but will be one of the best budget games of the year.

When you take out the cover to look at the instructions you will wonder why there is so much. But you will need to read them all to get the idea of the game before you start playing. Included with the instructions is a very informative background to the game.

The game has that nice basic ingredient of about anything that you want to, but you can't. Anyway that's true. You also have a 10-minute timer so you aren't going to be lost at all. One aim of the planets that you visit is to get control of the spaceship is required, to get you through some very tight spots. In a personal battle to win the planet that you are visiting, and are good enough, you will see it blow up at the end of the playing area.

There are over 200 planets for you to discover that save together will cause a battle after all, this is spread over 100 systems. Some of the planets may seem similar, or some are minor images of earlier planets. Out of these 200 planets you have to locate the 50 special planets and destroy them. In this form out to be a very big search operation and you will have a one in ten chance of finding a planet. The map system will certainly come in handy to show what you are in search for. When you decide to send a probe down to the planet you like, 'P' key instead of the star '1' key.

The graphics may be a little dated but beats much of the software that is just being released. The plotting is very smooth in all parts of the program, especially the landscape and map screen.

On the right screen the planet of your choice is seen rotating. Occasionally an alien message may decide to appear on the screen, which will take a lot of decoding to be able to understand it. No sound has been included in the game so you will have to make your own explosion sounds.

On the whole Xcel is a game that is well worth the asking price, and will keep you excited for a few months at least. It's about those that bought it when it was first released, they are missing the bargain of the year.

Skyhawk is a plain and simple shoot 'em up, with the difference on plain and simple. Bug-Byte has taken advantage of this homebrewy shoot 'em up—who needs a storyline, anyway? All you need is a ship, and enemies to shoot at. Don't you?

In fact, Skyhawk is just plain boring. It looks promising to start with. You have to take an arrow and fire, then get in the air in time to avoid the first wave of enemies. You then shoot down the rest of the wave and repeat the cycle.

But it's no more. If you're using the keyboard, the controls are very sluggish, particularly when you want to turn the ship. I never did work out how to refuel—when I attempted, it happened to accident.

And probably the enemies move fast, you can't even at top-speed, you can't catch them either. They're faster than you. And there are so many of them, you can go for ever without a rest of an enemy. In fact I spend most of my time staring at the screen, attempting to refuel.

The graphics are boring, too—essentially, stunning green land and blue sky. Bug-Byte can do better than this.

We need Programmers, Graphic Artists and Computer Musicians to help develop our big hits for 1987. Games that will follow in the footsteps of classics such as 'Commando', 'Circus and Goblins', 'Paperboy' and others. In 1987 we will be releasing some of the year's most prestigious titles — coin-op conversions, TV and film licenses, character merchandised games — and several original products.

In particular, we are looking for personnel who will work on our biggest projects. These are the titles that are most important to us, and worth the most to you. Personnel working on these 'Special' projects would be expected to work 'in-house' and take some part in the design, specification and development of the game. In return you will be offered highly competitive terms, either royalty or lump-sum if you prefer, and the security of working under contract.

Successful applicants will almost certainly have a history of involvement with commercially successful games; we are looking for Experienced Professionals.

MURDER PARTY, from Electronic Arts, takes on all the chores — leaving you with the important task of creating the proper party environment for the guests.

The program not only prints the invitations, it also eliminates the vexing necessity of the host having to know beforehand who the criminal really is. Only the computer knows WHO DID IT, and it isn't telling.

Two distinct games are included. The Big Kill is based on the popular movie The Big Kill, and concerns a bunch of college friends reunited over the apparent suicide of a friend.

IMPURE follows along the lines of the Dynasty television show, with a well-to-do family gathered to squabble and fight over the will of the un-beloved matriarch.

Each person attending receives a packet of information which includes biographical data about themselves and the other participants (each game can be played seven to eight times with a different ending since the computer can juggle the facts around).

The action takes place in a series of rounds as each player takes about his/her life in relationship to the victim, and to the others present.

As the game progresses, conversation becomes more intense as layer after layer of ugly truth is revealed about everyone.

Finally, it's time to reveal the killer. (Did you guess correctly? You'll just have to play the game to find out.)

INSTANT

Empty your mind of all outside and polluted thoughts. The disciple Kamein has abandoned the one true path of Mibius the Wanderer, and stolen the City of Celestial Harmony.

But and devastation now result. It is your destiny to seek out Kamein, return the City and bring peace back to the earthly plane.

This cannot be accomplished by thought alone. Your body must become as strong as oak, as potent as driving rain, and as directed as a ray of sunlight.

To help in attaining this goal are three instructors: The Sacred Master, the Martial Arts Master and the Zen Master.

Only when you have finished this training can you venture forth in search of the City.

The search will take you through strange places, past obstacles and unusual dangers (possessed of magical properties, beware and be on guard).

Mibius is an adventure game that places as much emphasis on strategy and thought as it does on action and quick reflexes. Fighting and drinking may not be exciting, but it's vital.

There's little time to wipe the sweat off your hands before returning them to the keyboard.

■ Wargame fanatics will be giddy on how a scenario can be completely changed by a single tactic, or through the application of a different maneuver. Their only complaint will be how "limited" a campaign may be, or how there aren't enough violations to its out. Time to shut us out, 'cause now there's Wargame Construction Set from SG.

The construction set does exactly what you think it enables the wargame player to create his own world to battle in, whether it's Roman legions, NATO armies, or Space Marines.

A main menu prompts for the creation of all aspects of the upcoming game, played either against the computer or another person. The game can also be saved on disk for later use.

You create the various components using icons and menu screens. Complete maps can be formed, with rivers, roads, woods, cities and towns.

Combat takes place in phases which range from Observation through to Fire. There are six difficulty levels to set that could be asked for, and even the color of the various elements can be changed at whim.

■ Sega was a quality drawing program for the Atari ST. Sega title completely outlines it. This new enhancement adds more features than can be easily mentioned, and brings the ST level with quality Amiga art packages like Demarcus Point and Angie Draw.

Sega title still uses two screens, one for the art while the other list commands. However, additional drop-down menus can also be accessed.

New features include a four plot animation cycle, and extra onboard screens — depending on memory available.

A section of artwork can be turned into a book, which can be paged up as a self-contained book without the background.

These "peeps" can also be rotated, skewed and saved for later use.

An extremely convenient touch is that almost any kind of picture can be loaded, be it MacDraw, Pages or the Amiga III.

Files can be saved with a special compressed format for people packing on a disk as well.

■ Horror Strike Mission puts you in the pilot seat of a Mach 1, V-SICU. Vertical shoot takeoff and landing control plane, whose helicopter-like hovering ability gives it an edge in stability and movement.

Other than just going for a joyride, left's leave the aircraft corner and field for the nearby island.

The mission isn't too tough. Take out all the enemy fighters in the area, bomb the offshore and wipe it clean of tanks and surface to air missiles.

Good thing the battery is equipped with more than just speed — there's also a supply of force for defense, and two flame cannons and three laserwire surface to air missiles for a posture of extreme offense.

While the mouse controls direction and firing, keyboard presses affect speed and flyable controls. Oncoming targets will be noted on the HUD (heads-up display), and can be viewed in various magnifications from the radar map while in flight.

Horror features rapid movement combined with 3D shaded perspective. A unique "flipping" menu screen lets you set up the action to give you, or them, the edge.

You can even choose day or night scenarios. Just don't expect a leisurely flight.

■ Journey back with us to a time and feel a deck beneath your feet and a wind of your back. Peaks of the Barbary Coast joins animated action scenes with sharpness, as you trade and ply the seas of Northern Africa in the 18th Century. In search of your kidnapped daughter and her abductor, Bloodhead the Pirate.

You must rise her crimson within 30 days by finding goods between one port and another, while watching out for despicable rogues and ships flying the Jolly Roger.

Your vessel must be stocked with more than just cannon and ropes — there are sales to recruit and provide, as well as transactions to discuss.

Battles on the sea will affect both crews and goods, but hopefully a defeated pirate's ship will provide plunder or useful information. There seems to be some hidden treasure about as well.

Fast appears when necessary, either as a window (speed machines) or at the bottom of the screen.

All controls are handled by the joystick or mouse. A simplified version is also available for the very young (in years and wits).

Peaks is primarily a strategy game, one that can be played to completion within 90 minutes.

Careen-like graphics, original musical interludes and periodic animation enhance the program without turning it into just another shoot-'em-up, although that's pretty much what the battle sequence is.

Cannons must be loaded, aimed and fired at the enemy. They're also firing at you, with sometimes fatal results.

What will be the outcome? Will you end up paying off Bloodhead, or try to blow him and his scurvy crew out of the water?

■ Video Vegas addresses the difficult problem of how to get like a fool without ending up in the poor-house.

VV (video) a graphic representation of the most popular games to be found in any casino. There's 21* (or Blackjack), Keno, Draw Poker, and the ever popular sheep dollar Slot Machine.

EUREKA

Eureka was made to the ears of the C + VG Adventure Pipeline. It came blasting out of full volume from the Denmark stand at 1984's PCW Show — right next to where Keith Campbell and his two thirdeye apprentices, Paul Coppins and Simon Marsh, were dispensing clues to troubled adventurers.

One year later Eureka was sweet music indeed to Matthew Woodley, then aged 15, and now himself a member of the C + VG Adventure team. He had won the £25,000 prize by being the first person to discover the secret phone number to ring.

Here, Matthew explains how he came to play Eureka, and reveals the trials and tribulations that eventually led him to that all-important number!

It was at the PCW Show at 1984 when Eureka first came to my attention. But then, I had been the proud owner of a Commodore 64 for six months, and my software collection was devoid of an adventure game. With this in mind, I visited the Denmark stand, took a leaflet, and gazed at the various half of lovely money. And gazed, and gazed, and gazed.

That night, when I returned home, I talked about it to my brother Mark. As it was rather short of money, I persuaded him to buy it, and the next morning he sent £15 off to order the game. But Mark was just about to go off to University (he's 18) and by the time Eureka arrived, I had the game and the computer all to myself!

I played all the adventures, to start with, and then chose my favourite, Roman Adventure, to try to finish first. After playing for a few hours, I started to draw up a map, and then continued with the other adventures, but becoming rather frustrated at the lack of a save-game facility. I left them, and resorted to playing arcade games.

Sometimes in 1985, C + VG printed a map and solution to the Prehistoric Adventure, and I took to Eureka again. After completing Prehistoric with ease, I moved on to Wartime Germany. Now my interest was being fuelled increasingly by the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, and within a couple of weeks I had completed it.

Next I went back to Roman Italy, which took a few weeks to complete, as the problems seemed more complex. Once I followed the temptations to go to the cogs, and started a line to combine the falling Nemo (how come he wasn't at the cogs?) I had the Italianus.

From Rome to the Caribbean, the last game in chronological order, and also the hardest. With the aid of a history book to answer some of the introductory questions, I eventually had another Italianus.

By now it was Easter 1985. I had started to look at the Eureka booklet, which came with the game, and which contained cryptic clues by Stephen Byrne, I quickly finished the Arthianus adventure.

I could write a whole book myself on all the lessons I've learned since I tried to obtain that telephone number! One method was to make a number from the Prehistoric board's, and to work out the morse code in the German section.

The main answer was in The Bible, I made the connect ion with The Bible from Roman Adventure, but those were references in the booklet, which listed as Revelation Chapter 22 Verse 15. This comes from clues in the book, which give: re, c, v, 22, 15.

Having got the biblical verse, the letters had to be transcribed to numbers in Base 10 form. So the sequence was: 4, 1, 2, 3, 4, 3, 6, 7, 5, 9, 11, 12, 13 etc. The third verse of Chapter 6 in the booklet tells you there are "three of each ignoring one". In the biblical verse there are 4 "THIRDS" and 3 "AND'S". So ignoring the last THIRDS, it turns out that using Base 10, each letter in THIRDS and AND tells us a certain number. For example, T falls at 25, 40, and 52. Add these together to get 120, then add the three digits of 120 together to get 3.

Therefore T=3.

So there are six numbers for the six letters. Using the biblical verse the next four letters can be filled in, giving ten numbers and ten letters. Examining the pictures and poems from each chapter reveals two letters. Each advent to is represented in the map picture in chapter 8. Arthianus was the rare, and its letters are 1, 8. The number 1 is 1, 0, and for 8 is 2, so the phone number constructed till

At this point I rang the number to be answered by an automaton. It went round nothing about Eureka, so when it asked me to leave a message, I hung up! I subsequently phoned three more times, and I phoned up enough times to give my name and address, and reason for phoning. And then I rang again, because I thought I had forgotten to add my phone number.

Finally I got it right, and 15 minutes later, Dominic Woodley of Denmark phoned me up to tell me I had won! After picking myself up from the floor, I told my family, and we went to the Denmark office to celebrate.

If you played Eureka too, I hope you enjoyed it! Keep your fingers crossed for Eureka IV, which will also have the lovely prize money.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my family (especially my Mum) for encouragement, and to thank Mark and Dominic, Lizzy, and C's, at Denmark, for making the year so enjoyable.

GRANGE HILL

You boy! Stand still. What's that in your pocket? Come on, you miserable little creature, show me. George HILL Computer game? Right, this is confiscated. Get it back at the end of term. No tests. On your way, boy.

- TELEVISION ADAPTATION
- CAST
- THE SERIES WILL BE ON AMERICAN CBN
- THE TV SERIES
- TELEVISION ADAPTATION

Grange Hill is a classic of children's television. It's been running for ten years now. An ideal candidate for a computer game, I would have thought. Angus Piers writes an obviously think so, too.

As the time of writing I've only seen a pre-production Spectrum and Amstrad version. So a full review will follow later. This is what you might call a half-term report.

Strictly speaking this is an arcade adventure, the type of game Keith Campbell makes his eyebrows at when it goes into the adventure section.

The storyline is based on the book Grange Hill After Hours, written by the programme's creator Phil Redmond, and centres on two characters, Luke "Gonch" Gardner and Paul "Hollo" Holliday.

Gonch has a problem. His stereo machine has been confiscated.

The game begins without it, his mum will not be pleased. Gonch's last walkman was stolen from the staffroom when it was also confiscated. What new demands will be his new one everything he goes home.

Unless Gonch can get his walkman back, he's in danger of getting a serious case of the winks from mum and possibly a few backhands. Not a pleasant prospect.

There's only one answer — get the walkman back. Gonch gets Hollo to accompany him on his hazardous task.

The unscripted duo must find a way into the school. Find their way through a maze of heating pipes, avoid getting caught, get the stereo and get out — all before midnight strikes.

The top half of the screen is taken up with a window on the action.

You control Gonch with the joystick. Hitting the fire button will bring up a menu with various options: PICK UP, DROP, USE, EXAMINE, etc. When you meet other characters you can also talk to them and get a response.

There's even a drug packet in the game. Don't — never say anything but "No!" to him. It'll get you extra points.

There are lots of items to collect — fishing rods, some useful for luring a dog which keeps harassing Gonch, and two more.

The Amstrad version has some decent digitised pictures of Hollo, Gonch and Griffin, the school's caretaker, but the graphics at the rest of the game don't really impress.

The puzzle, however, I found very intriguing and entertaining.

The text for the adventure contains some really annoying mistakes. Just take a look at the screen shots on this page. One version "TALK KILADY" instead of "TALK'S KILADY" and another "SHES A RIGHT NUT-ITIS" instead of "SHE'S A RIGHT NUT-ITIS".

And again, there's a space missing between TIPPING/STAIR. Answering Okay, I accept these mistakes don't really affect the game but they do grate.

Grange Hill was designed by Colin Jones, whose past games have never been different. Does de Machine and id probably bring the best games. The programming is by Barry Design.

Final judgement must wait until we receive a finished version so there are no scores. But if pressed for an opinion it would have to be:

"Hummus...? Will it be a bit?" I can definitely say, "Please. Sir, I don't know."

Right you bet, now you really are in trouble! The Faringdon Fiend, number one Public Nuisance, is at large, leading a one-Fiend campaign against poor adventure writers. Unlike more apathetic mortals, The Fiend does not sit still and accept bad games in silence. He complains loudly and bitterly, and mainly to Keith Campbell. The Fiend's identity still remains a secret—even to us at C+VG. But eventually, Keith broke. No longer could he alone bear to suffer this regular onslaught of anger and abuse alone. So we asked The Fiend to give you, the readers, a taste of his venom. Here, for the first time in C+VG, The Fiend writes . . .

Where did I come from? What awful event led to the birth of The Fiend? What caused The Fiend to crawl out of the dark corners of the mind of an ordinary adventure player? All this will remain a secret, known only to myself and those superior beings that were not too busy to look out a couple of measly quid to join the C+VG Adventure Club. They found out in the last newsletter!

Surface reality that I am here, I exist, and I will never go away until producers of adult games, stop selling faulty programs to us poor innocent players.

Things have been so bad this past year, that The Fiend can think of only ONE game that raised feelings of admiration, integrity, and of money well spent. Every other game, and I have played most of them, has raised anger, for one reason or another.

Does anyone out there think Knave of the Kings is funny? Then you are too easily amused. Does anyone actually think that any "funny" game is a true adventure? If you do, then I raise my shaggy eyebrows in your general direction.

It is a sad indictment of the current state of adventure writing, that as I sit here typing, I am counting my eyes over the top 30 adventure games being played (as defined in another magazine, I admit) and I see that 18 of them are arcade adventures, and that the highest rated adventure is The Moblin at number six.

But it is not of these that I wish to rant and rave, but at what I would call "proper" adventures. You know, with words and graphics (if you must) and without the little man running about "manipulating" objects and replacing the old spade.

So what is it that made The Fiend into this rage? What is it about adventure games that gets right up my amply proportioned nostril?

And for those of you who have not read the last page of your favorite mag lately, I must say that The Fiend's nose is much bigger than that of Tony Talisman and many more things get up it that his, and it has far more horrible things hanging down it as well.

It is The Fiend's proposition that a well-written adventure should contain many puzzles and problems, and then the solutions should be logical, even if obscure.

These solutions should involve the manipulation of objects, or the prosecution of the said objects, at the appropriate time and/or place.

The use of obscure vocabulary as a solution is usually unacceptable. So here are my prizes:

What if you can honestly say that you have never been stuck in an adventure because of a vocabulary problem? The Fiend has, many times. Perhaps the most glaring example of this is contained—or should I say not contained!—in Claymore Castle. Can anyone justify why the game does not recognize the word "expound"?

I call this kind of stupidity the "skate come" syndrome. Those of you who have played Ship of Doom will know exactly what I mean.

To make matters worse, the latest Scott Adams game, Fantasy's First, requires multiple word inputs to solve some of the problems. And they must be the right words in the right order.

One of my favorite hates is

Fourth Protocol. What a wonderful game it would have been if only they had finished it first. How can any game get onto the mar list which wastes when you simply enter one of the locations? It happens in my version, in The Marston.

And was I alone in my ability not to finish Devotion because I could not put down a piece of plastic pipe, because, reasonably, I had held it while I connected it? You must drop it before connection or you get stuck with it—it becomes undroppable!

Next, ever, should a game kill off an adventure without prior warning. The warning may be embedded in an "examine" routine—that is totally acceptable. And it is reasonable to deduce anyone stupid enough to jump off a cliff, or drop a bomb on themselves. But it is well below the belt for a perfectly reasonable and logical action to result in death.

As an example, I cite Sea Of Blood for the corpse in the tunnel before the Boy's nest. What would you do if presented with this object? You would examine it, of course.

WHIRN! If you do then some sort of alarm will trap you and you will burst into your body.

Or you could try taking the ring from the skeleton. Same result, and back to the start you go.

Why, oh why, do people think it acceptable to produce illogical games provided they call them "funny"? They don't make The Fiend laugh. I will excuse Tony Big Game, however, because of its wonderful voice routine. But how about Elvira?

Knowing on the door elicits no response, but moping the hallway bell does! And what about The Moblin, where the only way to pass the ballroom eyes is to wait TWICE in each location?

Who on their night mind could figure that one out? I could go on, but I feel my blood pressure rising.

I do not like graphics. I hate graphics. They occupy memory that could be better used to enlarge the game and improve the vocabulary. It appears, however, that only that man Mr. Campbell and The Fiend dislike graphics. (Here—leave me out of this K.C.) What's the matter with the rest of you? Do you lack the imagination to play a game without it, or do you just like the pretty pictures?

The Fiend challenges anyone to rise to the defense of the graphics level's games when compared with their wonderful early adventures. I wouldn't mind half so much if these graphics were worth having.

This is less of a problem nowadays, but then they re-released Holy Ghost, didn't they? The Fiend couldn't play this game, and started screaming with boredom while waiting for a picture to draw, or the computer to reply.

The Moblin has them. Sinister Lord Of The Kings, Herlock, and Fantasy's First. All three have one thing in common, and that is, you can spend more time choosing the characters around than in solving the game. Fantasy's First is a classic, where one independent character could, and often did, quite happily kill another, and that other was needed to complete the game!

Now it is time for me to sink off into the undergrowth once more. But before I go, what is the only adventure I found worthy this twelve month's game? What game is so good that it passes all my stringent criteria?

Well, I am not going to tell you! The Public Nuisance!

KNIGHT ORC

As exclusively predicted in C+ VG last June, Knight Orc was to be Level V's next major adventure following Price of Magic. Now it is almost upon us, and Level V's Peter Austin, complete with Amda, travelled the mountains from Bracknell to Brighton to give Keith Campbell this exclusive preview. . . .

A number of the early advents are produced by Level V were each complete in themselves, self-contained parts of triologies.

These triologies were brought together under the Rainbow label recently as Jereth the Darkman and William the Brave.

In Knight Orc, Level V has departed from their normal practice of producing a single game at a time, and has come up with a whole new trilogy all at once. It will be necessary to complete part one before proceeding to the other parts, although, as an introductory game, the first part is complete in itself.

This is the first game to be developed by the Austins as the Atari XL, and it was done using a completely new dictionary system. The range of commands and facilities available to the player has been increased to the point of giving the game an entirely new 'look', eliminating the redundant aspects of placing an adventure with a large number of locations.

Knight Orc is a multi-character, single-player game. There are about fifty independent characters in the game, who all go about their normal lives while the adventure is underway. They can be commanded, and can be followed. They also have a tendency to possess any of their property that may have found its way into the player's grasp during the game.

This is where the game differs from all others that I can think of, and points to the direction of future Level V adventures. Peter Austin believes that characters have been too fixed in their reactions to events, even in role-playing games. In Knights, for example, the many people attending Veronika Astoroff's fancy dress ball all wander around doing their own thing, but respond very flexibly to any developments in their surroundings, unless specifically allowed for in the game.

In Knight Orc, things are much more flexible. The player can get to any location (providing there isn't a puzzle to solve enroute) by commanding GO TO (place). This makes the player along the best route to that location, displaying all the relevant information as he passes through. If the player has a change of mind whilst this is happening, the process can be halted by simply pressing any key. This naturally translates in the need to make a map, indeed, the player is positively discouraged from doing so in the game's instructions.

Not only can the player go to any location, he can command other game characters to do so as well. So, for example, HELM, FIND THE SWORD, GET THE EXPLOD, FIND ME, GIVE THE SWORD TO ME, will see Helm moving off in a search of the sword. Eventually she will return to wherever you are at the appropriate time, and deliver the sword. In the meantime, you can be getting on with something else.

As far as the program is concerned, Helm is not just held back for a suitable number of moves and then made to re-appear at the player's current location with the sword — she actually goes and gets it just as the player would do himself. That means that if the player happened to interrupt her route to go from the sword's location, he would meet up with her. He could then, if he wished, FOLLOW HER, and would do so until he commanded STOP FOLLOWING.

A number of characters can be given similar commands conveniently, the limit being the space remaining in the buffer that keeps track of it all.

PREVIEW

Only when that is full will the player be told he could not command another character.

Pete sees this sort of feature being the way adventures will tend to develop in the future—and particularly Level 9 adventures. "In the past, adventures have tended to be linear tales. We've tried to create the same kind of a model reality, with things happening all around all the time."

Another new feature will make its debut on the larger machines, those with at least 128K of memory like the Atari 512, Amiga, IBM, and possibly Atarisoft PC-50. The player will have the ability to revisit his previous commands by a single keystroke, and to continue to do so, going back one command further each time.

The narrative text, too, has come under treatment. To make it seem more like written text, as opposed to computer-generated text, the program has been used extensively to link two distinct actions. As an example, where most adventures would say "SUSAN SQUEALS 'I'M FIGHTING A WAR,'" SUSAN HITS YOU," Knight One will say "SUSAN SQUEALS 'I'M FIGHTING A WAR.'" AND SHE HITS YOU."

Since their early games like Colossal, the size of the A-code program which drives the adventure has typically increased from 3.5K to 16K. Text compression allows this increase, while still leaving room for lengthy descriptions on the smaller machines. For most of the 8-bit machines, Knight One will be available on cassette, although Commodore 64 owners with a drive will have the choice of a disk version. The game will play the same on each machine, but the amount of text will be limited or augmented, as necessary, depending upon the space available.

Level 9's graphics system, too, has undergone a major change. For disk versions, digitized graphics have been introduced, giving much more detail and range of colors than before. They are effectively photographic reproductions of the artist's original drawings, but made just a little better by the minute color shifts on the screen. This situation, in fact, adds to the effect, given the style of drawing employed.

Knight One players will also be hit by a surprise in Margaret Schuler's graphics. They can be slid up and down over the text using a mouse, and left hanging in any desired position. However, in the initial display, they do not roll off and on the screen, but instead, disappear from picture to picture. This method was chosen, says Pete, because it is faster than the rolling type of display.

All these new goodies will help the player to enjoy the adventure without the dangers of breaking through endless locations, drawing maps that don't quite fit on the paper, and remembering where everything is. But what into the game. But what I did see looked very impressive... it's going to be great fun just wandering around having all the characters at your back and call, never mind solving the puzzles! I can't wait to see what happens when I of the plot and puzzles—without which, no amount of technical wizardry will make a good game?

When I saw it, Knight One was not sufficiently advanced to play; instead, Pete himself was discussing it with CHLAW ME WITH ME, one of those minisquad programmers he'd let in to help them get second to the game of an adventure they want to try, without having to play right command a number of people each to get the same object and bring it to me! And they fight over it! To the death? What other sort of conflicting commands will the perverse adventures be able to think up?

Knight One will be ready for review in time for next month (C=91) — make sure you don't miss out on what looks set to be one of Adventure's Games for 1987!

HELPLINE

Wandering around with nowhere to go and no idea of what to do next, can be very boring, as The Wizard this month explains. Walter Wanderland seems to be a game of that sort, but Sharon Lawrence cannot decide what her final goal really is, other than to score 100 per cent.

She can't use the old left, nor get past the Wrecks, so there may not be fair means, and how can she get the mailer from the glow-eyes, she asks?

Stuck at the top of the Eerie Tower, is Alan Osborne of Ketterham. He has found a trap he doesn't know what to do with, and a cat driver he doesn't know how to control in Americana's Spy Trek. Let's hope he has a head for heights!

Having completed seventy percent of Demon From The Darkside, Gregory Quinn, a regular player and chess guy, can't kill the evil Lord Drakoon. He thinks he needs someone to help him, and that person just could be Steele. But if so, there is no one to send this help?

Who has been playing Adventure? I haven't, that's for sure! Jessie Chai of Chappilly has, though, and is being harassed in Part 2. He wonders what objects he should have taken into Part 2 with him?

Hey, A. Manning of Arizona found a bug! He is trapped in a room as it is dead and in it, and later exits as North, North-East, and East. But he cannot use them, and eventually dies. Is he a blood sucker, or simply buggy?

Here is a message for Ann Marie, who is French, and writes from Kuwait. Your letter to the Helpline became separated from your address, so I couldn't write to tell you that in Cuern, you should go round to the back of the car and unlock the boot. Then head across the fields to find the cross-street. And if you write again with your address, I'll be obliged to return the bug bits and bug you out!

Who can help our Italian friend Andrea Mura, currently on military service, and stuck at the bottom of some dirty stairs in Games Of Chance?

Gary Gould of Bristol, has got the murder to solve his guilt, in Viper Cuts. But he can't arrest him. He cannot follow out Lera and Nadia Lafayette, nor how they are connected with the murder.

Mohammed Fiaz of Birmingham, is also unable to arrest the guilty party, despite having got his confession. And what other examinations can he perform besides an autopsy?

Mike Hodgson is in the Neon Glow, and cannot deactivate the Blade of Dread in Chamber 8. Chris Little of Blackpool has the same problem.

Dick! That is the state of Bare Herbs, in Armen. Stuck in a ship, that he cannot get out. Who can give him a helping hand?

Here is a helping hand for Leslie Ellis from Hungary. Andrew Hoyle of Cardiff says of them, in Poach Protocol: "Ignore them."

There has been a period of accuracy where from regular advertiser Andrew Bennett. But he hasn't been able! After settling down at Poly, he's now changed his tel for an Atari 1050X, and he himself is for what is the most difficult adventurist he has played to date — Friday.

He is trying to make a spell in the candle, and checked to find nothing happens. Now he is burning midnight oil in search of a crescent moon — the only thing he feels he may have overlooked. He's also noticed that other people are having trouble in moving the meteor — and so is he!

Some problems come from games that are very little known.

If they are of the most under variety, and not available in shops, there may be usually unable to offer help if we haven't been sent a copy for review.

A dead-end letter came from Mark Kent of Newcastle upon Tyne. "I've been trying to get a copy of The Pawn but my issue Spectrum 128," says Mark, "but the 'computer' shops up here are totally unhelpful, not even willing to check if it's been released yet, or if they have it on order!"

Mark offered a deposit for the game, but they refused, saying adventures are a minority interest.

"They got quite angry when I asked if all the graphics and design packages were in great demand. This was a shop supposedly staffed by experts, yet they all looked blank when asked a thing technical," added Mark.

I'm sure there are plenty of small shops where computer games is a way of making "new" money. Since many, particularly older people, are frightened to go near a computer, others almost grudgingly consider themselves "experts" if they are able to plug a system together, and type: RUN.

Their lack of knowledge of the subject will put them, though, Mark, for in ignoring The Pawn, they are closing their eyes to the beginning of a whole new revolution in games budgets habits.

But not all computer stores are as foolish as this, though.

Visit any one local games shop, Gather in Highgate, and you will see copies of almost every adventure, you can't imagine, at stock.

And you should have seen their eyes pop out of their heads when I took in a pre-production copy of C-64 PAND, instead out on one of their machines!

The reason I did so, was due to a possible problem you may run into if you play The Pawn (or even a Lord of the Rings adventure) on a C-64. If you have a faulty VHC-chip in your machine, and some variations released by Commodore didn't build the specification as interpreted by Magnetics. So-called it may cause the game to crash.

The fault will not show up under Commodore's standard diagnostic tests, so your local store is unlikely to be able to confirm the condition.

But the people at Magnetics Soledad, who know the insides of a 64 like the back of their hands, have come up with a REALLY COMPLEX test, which will tell you if your VHC chip is faulty. There is Steady Print's Basic program listing that checks it: POKE 32768,31: GOTO 30

RUN this program, and the effect will be a wide blue band rolling up your screen, over some red-on-black patterns. If your VHC chip is faulty, this will crash within about one minute, and the computer will lock up. Take it to your local 64 specialists, and ask them to change the chip. Under this misapprehension if you are told the chip is not faulty.

Acklam:

Hack the phone for a magnet.

Accliam J. (TTC-00):

In the circular passageway is a wall that can be chopped down. After hacking the electrician to pieces and getting the fuse, try and kill the hypnolembic. Close all the doors, turn on each side, using the silent card, to get a present from the bookworm.

Active Tumbler (Pant 1): To cross the stream, do a bit of climbing first!

Bully lion: A little bellum gives you a little voice. Give what you find in the lion's cage to lions.

Beard of the Rings: Moria gate is jammed with ice, so you can make a Gubbi onyx! In part three, let SANSU guide you, and use HOG to get the rope. You need to sustain help to escape from the wall!

Boredom Time: Burned your hands? Try the doctor's desk.

Castle Blackwater: To delay explosion, use the flame resistant liquid from the lockers. Wear the crown and carry the scepter to get the second. SAY ABBA to use the bookmatch — but use it wisely! Wave the staff to pass the troll. Play the violin with the horn, to get the eggs.

Castle of Terror: Cool in hot pot with ice, for a more loading down. Examine the barrel outside the mill! If you find nothing, examine the other! Get a spear and have a break, to find the Drog's horn-picking stake!

Catamonic: Go to north, and go go south, the robot's a problem! Sing and invite Hilt to join you, to shove him up. To take the sword, go east after maddling yourself at the demons, and get the guardian. Use this to get the sword. Covers of 4 hands: The key problem is solved by to leaping the rope.

Cadaver: For a blunt instrument that negates disarming, search the sewers.

Emasculi like Gai: Must from the native village for a head. Fancy a puzzle? An axe can carve a mighty hole in a log — if you know how to do it! Enthusiastic Seamus: Carrying the decision into the cave will cut the swampy, go E, SE, E, and E on the swamp.

Fahrenheit 451: Show the butterfly to Clavus. The house on the library steps is interpreted in Ecclesiastes! The kink is in the restaurant at 453-54. Neat in Chemistry: is in the doctor's desk. Heat the padlock to get into the magic shop. Tell them you are sick at the hospital, and in the treatment room tell them where Dr Foster went. Use a clip on the cabinet.

Fantasia (Hamm): Go and open the iron door, and get Boris to kill the guardians for E, NE, N to find the luffa basket, and N, E, NE, E, N to return. Do most the man on the train, near Fwack, carry an arty mug, and be a goodwilder risk! For wedding bells, drive with mecum and report, to enter museum.

Helm: Blow the griffin, and KAZAM! Shine the torch to avoid hypnosis. Translate the sign in the canyon with reverse logic. In an and in crossing the gorge. To enter the queue, run a wood fold (Lushwood) styles.

Heaven of the Karm: The talismen chamber is south of the king's anteroom. Drink the whole potion to pass the fengate. Your first hero can open something with a bit of leverage! Hilde's maul and steel rings will lead to a chesty Kachin. Got a hater to use a maul for a big leap.

Hilde Hiler's Guide to the Galaxy: Reverse common sense from the maze, and show the door both tea, and tea!

ESCAPE FROM KHOSHIMA

- SUPPLIER: ATLANTIC SOFTWARE LTD.
- MASTHEAD: AMSTRAD, IBM
- PRICE: £49.95/$74.95
- REVIEWER: KEITH

You have been held Prisoner Of War by the Japanese for over a year.

Raving on the difficulty of escaping through the Perseus Jungle, vicinity of the camp is minimal.

Today, there are only two guards left in the camp, and they are both sleeping in the bow of the afternoon . . .

The object of the game is to escape from the camp and through the jungle.

The game starts off on the barracks rooms. There are just rows of empty beds, an open door through which a soldier can be seen.

Oh well, be bold and try the alarm. I walk through the door and straight into the camp compound. The soldier did not stop me. My luck is fading.

The jungle lies to the south. I keep on walking east and on and on. (Where's that? I'm hopelessly lost. I say for help. PARDON? Come on the reply. It was worth a try. Back to the beginning.)

Various objects are lying around the camp, most are immediately visible. So the first stage of the camp involves collecting everything you are lying around, and finding one or two other items.

One doesn't have to be too discerning, since everything that is available can be carried.

After visiting the Commandant's office, guard room, barracks, and hospital, there are numerous cries to the jungle — but which one should be taken?

And will you make it unharmed? If not, the guards will send the dogs after you. The weather is hot enough to tell you through thirst, and flooding water is out to stay — although once you do, you may find more of it than you bargained for!

The adventure is quite competently written, but lacks that certain sparkle necessary to make it stand out from many others.

It is all rather routine and tedious.

There are graphics, but many of the pictures are almost identical to each other, and some are particularly inspiring.

The word COUNT across was of a marvel, with a plain, zig-zag shirt of blue crossing a girl.

From the way the game starts and develops, I strongly suspect the title was used to create it, although no mention is made on the map.

Escape from Khoshima was named AFTERNOON commands such as Break Water, Open Gateway, Get Knife, Discretion commands are 20 for North etc.

You can turn the graphics off and play it as a single-player word-based adventure which, when taking into the quality of these two, is a real thing.

Not that the price, and should give some hours of play.

Four of the sun's eight rays have been stolen by the Moon Rapist. It seems that the MR is acting in retaliation against the proposed marriage of his daughter Diana, to the Sun Lord. But by dawn tomorrow, if the rays have not been found and returned, the sun will not shine, and all living things on earth will perish. Your job is to find them.

Well, despite the sickly scenario, if the rays are treated as treasures, there's no reason why the adventure shouldn't be enjoyable. I thought 'So I proceed on.

This is a Quillid adventure of the primitive sort, that is to say, while on the way, with Spectra characters set, and square cursor. True, there are a few illustrations, although I found none on my production copy.

But it is the first and the logic that lets the game down. I examined a cartoon of a cat across, and apparently it contained a toy, for the screen was redisplayed with the new object listed, but with no message to tell me I had found something. I examined the toy, and the same thing happened. This time, a battery appeared.

I picked up the lot, and then every time I examined either cartoon or toy, the toy or the battery, respectively, was dropped, and removed from my inventory. Trying to insert the battery on the toy brought the killer: "It's something else."

But the more pain for me, was a mental hell problem. Having found some trust and better in the kitchen. I recognized the bat but might use the belt. Trying to pick it up, I was told: "It's not here." I couldn't believe my eyes! The program was lying: the better W.A.S. there — it was listed plainly on the screen! The word wouldn't let me pick it up or let me complain that it was too dry without better spread on it. SPREAD BUTTER, spelled it in a new object, BUTTERED TOAST. The final stage was trying to GET TOAST. You've passed — still too dry without better spread on it!

All this goes to prove that, with the Quill, anyone can write an adventure without knowledge of a programming language. But to have usability, it must be usable logically. All the logical steps that a real programmer would have had to write into his code, must be properly thought out, and supplied to

The Quill. They are manifestly absent in Alen.

I feel a bit rotten about giving this game a poor review. Author Audrey Meredith, of Dublin, has dedicated the game to me, on account of the enjoyment and help she has received from the Helpdesk. However, I would be taking on my duty to readers, the prospective purchasers, were I to recommend it — sorry Audrey.

On the reverse side of the finished cassette (which I haven't seen) contains some instructions on adventure playing, and a three-part adventure called Doors, aimed at the novice adventurer. "Friendly and engaging," is how Audrey describes them. Green Door takes you into a world of fantasy about a green witch. Black Door is set in an Egyptian Tomb, and Blue Door is about Blackboard.

Have your printers for a better game.

Good afternoon. My name is Horatio Holmes. You are probably wondering why I have asked you to join me here in the Gargyle Hotel!

Did you see the other guests? They are not ordinary people, in fact they are five of the world's greatest mystery writers.

One of them, I do not know which one of yet, is our target contact with literary masters and has decided to commit a "perfect" murder this very evening.

But, do not fret me, for I am truly a great detective. With your help, I shall seek out this would-be killer, force a confession, and prevent a heinous crime. It is a mere fact that I have only until midnight to solve this disaster. Nor do I fear the consequences of error, although I have heard vague rumors of what might happen should I guess wrong.

First we shall study my files. I have compiled much about these so-called guests: Society Mountaintop, Lord Peter Wimsey, Agatha Marple, Miles Brewster and Claudia van Hallow. (Now please the pertinent (and important) facts about these personalities, their habits, likes and dislikes.)

I have placed a network of sophisticated camera monitors and listening devices throughout the hotel. These shall enable us to "pin" almost anywhere electronically, silently observing a monitoring their conversations.

There is also a portable mobile unit on which is extensively equipped for gathering clues from the writer's rooms.

This can not be done, however, until after the correct response has been given to a mystery trivia keep track of any clues found inside the rooms, especially notes or messages that might indicate possible clandestine meetings.

I have also installed a video tape recorder with three timers. It will enable us to record events even if we are close and the red herring.

We must not neglect the guests, let us approach and speak with them. This can best be done through the video telephone; there is no need to leave the comfort of this desk console.

Observe their concerns and

questions.

Should the unthinkable occur, a security guard will have any efforts to enter the room for 15 minutes of game time, and we will have to try again later. Remember, we must not be able to directly view them at the time.

First then to consult my Detective Journal, for in it will be found all that we have discovered. Use it to organize the facts, and consider the reactions as they are revealed by facts and acquired information.

Yes, they are indeed like children in our hands. Soon they will empty their minds of all they know of this affair.

Now it is time to confront the killer-to-be. Watch this display as the plot is exposed. See him cringe as all becomes known, as his secrets are stripped away layer by layer. Are we not right? Ah Horatio, say we can do this!

Killed Until Dead lets you assume the persona of Horatio Holmes, hopefully with a bit less concern (depending perhaps upon the skill level chosen).

An onscreen clock counts down the 12 hours between noon and midnight, the time of the dastardly deed, consuming about 24 minutes of real time.

There are 20 different mystery plots to solve, each with its own clues and variations.

The joystick is used to make all the selections and adding to the fun is the humorous cartoon-like animation of the characters, and a wealth of digitized sound effects.

In the far future, with the earth's resources severely depleted, the dead are sent to an orbiting cemetery, the Necris Dome, to conserve space. The Dome is run by Manichoids, but their boss, the Arch Manichoid, has become a sentient renegade, and a threat to the earth. You are shipped aboard the Dome in a coffin, and your mission is to kill the Arch Manichoid at all costs.

With a background scenario as flimsy as this (if things were that bad, they'd re-use the corpse, instead of depleting fuel resources en route) to get to have into orbit the game itself has got to be an improvement.

That was my theory, anyway! The instructions tell you that PUSY LED will get inside it — apparently the parser was looking only for one letter, the 'Y' of YAK. This time, however, there was a pair of gloves inside.

Moving around the dome, I went from chamber to chamber, and came across Manichoids, and a Battle Droid, and all sorts of weird machinery, most of which wasn't of any effect. It seems that the extremely formidable power will work only on the Arch manichoid.

What a very strange game! To be successful, an adventurist must hold the interest of the player. Being weak on background, logic, atmosphere, and mystery, I soon found it failed to hold

GROWING PAINS

- SUPPLIER: THOMAS MAGUIRE
LTD LTD
- MAJOR RELEASE: COMING SOON
- PRICE: £14.95
- RECOMMENDED AGE: 12

Here is Adrian, grows up a bit since his famous school diary. Nine billion, and with 11 levels increasing, he's trying to cope with parents who keep pointing and bawling teenagers out.

His father's girl-friend has a baby, and moves in with Adrian's mum. His mother also has a baby, and smokes heavily at the social security offices when his girl-chef takes the car. Meanwhile, Pandora continues to dominate Adrian's thoughts, but the unexpected arrival of an American friend threatens their relationship.

Like Secret Diary (the game reviewed December 1983), Growing Pains comes in the form of diary entries. It is an interactive fiction of the 'multiple choice' variety, rather than an adventure proper. Every so often you get the opportunity to select what to do next, by number. For example, Adrian realises that he's never seen or had a dated body or a female nipple. Should he (1) Ask Pandora to show him any of hers? (2) Heave himself to ignorance; or (3) Ask Nigel for advice?

It's really like reading the book, with variations every time you make a decision. Random elements in the program, together with your choice of action, ensure that the game isn't the same every time around. Nor does it follow the Tom Swenson version slavishly.

The format of the play demonstrates Level 9's excellent adventure systems, adapted and used to good advantage in a text never originally intended. These are graphics, which don't add much to the proceedings, but at least this time the pictures are more relevant to the current subject. There's 'hypnotised', or should I say 'read aloud'? And there's plenty of text to read, decompressed from a state of virtual obfuscation. Even so, the game comes in four parts, each of which must be loaded sequentially when prompted.

But did I detect a glitch, or just a silly mistake in the narrative? The entry for December 31st refers to what is going on at school, and the ending of Christmas week. And the birthday party is held on Thursday November 4th.

The subject is to become the most popular boy in the neighbourhood, and every so often your percentage score is displayed, together with a scarily descriptive such as 'scarily puny schoolboy'. But don't expect to solve puzzles to achieve a 100% rating — this must be played by intuition! It should please Mike here everywhere — it is inevitably produced, and full of humour.

Adams, has been involved.

Not at present finished, the only UK adventure discovered to be currently playing Assassination, is Anita Sinclair. Playing by night as Magnetic Scrolls' VAX, she has a special arrangement whereby she can dial into Infocom's main computer in the USA.

"It's waiting a fortune — but it's worth it! It's a terrific game!" she exclaimed.

■ Two of Scott Adams' most difficult adventures, Savage Island Parts 1 and 2, are being released for a range of machines, by Tyndale. Complete with graphics, as well as the most popular machines, versions will be available for the Commodore Plus 4, in main packs.

Already reviewed in C+VE some years ago, the two releases will be up for re-review in their new formats, next month.

■ Incentive Software has announced new products in support of some of their Graphic Adventure Creation titles.

The Gold Paper Management System is a pair of spreads of 200 sheets of double-sided forms. Based around locations, they provide space for location descriptions and room descriptions, local conditions, and connections between rooms.

Since they do not provide for non-location data, they will help to keep track of things, but do not allow for complete documentation of a game.

Designed in neat off-format for easy filing, each pack costs £7.95, plus £1.25 towards postage. From Incentive, 2 Millers Farm, Calford Park, Aldersham, Cheshire RG7 4JH.

From the same address, a strip at £1.25 says Incentive carries the GAC adventure Hydra (Windmill). A 48-page booklet in half A4 size, this has contributions from Samus Lipscomb, Tim Stalich, Pat Winstanley, John Gwinnett, and Lesley Anderson.

Starting off with "How to write a good adventure" the book continues with a detailed look at how to use the various features of the GAC: markers, counters, diagnostics, and advanced commands are just a few of the topics covered. The booklet is more specific to one machine, but is IS specific to using the GAC.

■ I would like to ask other adventures whether they like big or small adventures. You may think this is an odd question, but I have large games. You often have millions of objects in a large game, such as Arxilla, and this makes my head spin!

Kvarkis is fast, which is not bad, but Lured games are so slow. The graphics would best be removed.

The only games that need graphics are the fantastic Quasimodo games. They really add to the atmosphere. Monk's Tale, Rockford, Arx.

Kvarkis I always think that the more compact the puzzles, the better the game.

■ Every year I make an assessment of the History of Adventuring. Here are my categories:

Smallest Playable Adventure: Ark.

This is a category which is going out of fashion, as people judge adventures by number of locations rather than what is achieved in those locations.

Most Bug-Ridden Adventure: Quasimodo (Spectrum version)

This is absurd. Despite sending it back, I still don't have a working copy. Barren up: Lord Of The Rings. Frankist Adventure: Very Big Cave.

This is surely such a subjective category, and many will argue in favour of Yorgus McNeil. However, I feel he often resorts to self-defence humour, whilst that of St. Jude's is truly scary.

Best Ending: Price of Magic. It has two endings, an optimistic and a pessimistic one. Thus you have to finish it twice to discover its secrets.

Most Religiously Mapped Games: Lord Of The Rings. Most commands in the manual not recognised? Arxilla is Shadow. Almost nothing in the instructions is actually accepted by the game, including the two example sentences! Kvarkis up: Lord of the Rings. Manual says HELP, game wants HINT.

I would be interested in what other readers think of my choices!

Melinda Harlow, Monk's, Shogun.

Kvarkis I've not played Q3 on a Spectrum, but it SEEMS to be bad to beat LR!

■ You may recall a while ago, I sent a full solution to Interceptor's Afterlock, for use in your column and helping. I also sent it to several other magazines, but only received an acknowledgement and a t-shirt from YORG magazine. I decided that the next solution would go exclusively to C+VE.

M. Kerr Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Kvarkis Thank you, Mr. Kerr! We always TRY to answer EVERY letter sent to the C+VE Adventure Helpline. It's nice to know our efforts do not go unrecruited!

■ So you thought The Planet's graphics were good? Well tell us you see the Gold Of Tibbers!

At a sneak preview of Gold back in January, I had expected to be shown a test-only game on Magnetic Scrolls' VAX computer. But after an all-night session debugging a corrupted parcel, Anita Sinclair was able to show me the first official version of the game, running on an Atari ST, complete with magnificent graphics.

Alongside the ST, artist Tristan Humphries was running through his C-44 graphics conversion for the benefit of Kim Gordon and Roddy Pratt. I can report that graphics for both machines are way, way, ahead of those in The Planet.

But graphics take second place in Magnetic Scrolls' priorities, to the game itself, and the parser which drives it. Enhancements have been made, and completely new commands added.

Has that whet your appetite? Gold Of Tibbers will be released by Random during May. Computer + Video Games' Adventure column will be bringing you an exclusive full review, and a look at developments at Magnetic Scrolls, in the next issue — due out on April 16th.

Don't miss being among the first to find out about one of the greatest adventures likely to come your way in 1987!

■ Whollywood Whiplash is one of two titles announced from Infocom. Due to be released later this year, it will be joined by Assassination, in the citation of which Arch Hydra's Gold and the Douglas.

Starlight Competition

What do stars, trains and roller-skates have in common? The answer is Starlight Express, the mega-successful West End Musical by Andrew Lloyd Webber.

And you could be sitting in the Apollo Victoria Theatre enjoying this show if you win our Starlight Competition. You'll really be stars.

Starlight is a new roller sketched by Andrew Lloyd Webber. Their first game is Greyfriars, about a mysterious forest village in the evil grasp of the evil forces and from Kermans the Mirror, a handsome cat, who decides to take on the forces.

Our friends at Starlight have come up with some prizes which will put a twinkle in your eye.

There are two first prizes of £1000 each to see Starlight Express and a copy of Greyfriars. The next five people will get a Greyfriars notebook and a copy of the game. It's further 10 people will get the game.

What do you get to see the action? Just answer the following questions and send your answers together with the printed coupon to Starlight Competition, Computer + Video Games, P.O. Box 1, 10-12 Farringdon Lane, London EC4A 3AJ. The closing date is April 1st.

1 What is a star? Is it:

- A) A flower
- B) A star
- C) A planet

2 Stars appear to twinkle. This effect is caused by the earth's atmosphere.

TRUE or FALSE?

3 Starlight Express is by Andrew Lloyd Webber. What is the following to see a Lloyd Webber musical?

- A) James Christ Superstar
- B) Phantom of the Opera
- C) Grease and the Amazing Technicolor Ballet
- D) Cats
- E) Little

Your Ticket To The Best In Sports

When was the last time you had the chance to attend a championship sporting event or better yet, play in one? Gamestar's series of outstanding sports simulations give you that chance. Make the playoffs. Play in the final round at Pebble Beach. Compete against the top teams.

Every Gamestar simulation is as real as the sport itself, from gameplay to strategy to graphics. So winning the championship won't be easy. If it was, it wouldn't be worth it.

For the very best in sports—the excitement, the challenge, even the championship—Gamestar is your ticket.

GO-GO WITH

Wowser! Let's go with Gadget, the world's most brilliant crimebuster and heehee superstar! Now the criminal capers of Gadget and his friends have been turned into a computer cartoon by the Wizards of Oz. Make the French connection with Gadget and take on the agents of M.A.D. in the Circles of Fear!

Six million of you watch Inspector Gadget's adventures on TV. Why? Because it's the funniest thing since Dangerhouse, that's why.

Gadget is a cartoon clone of Inspector Clouseau, hero of all those Pink Panther movies. He bumbles his way through criminal cases aided by his incredible array of gadgets built in to his standard-issue detective-style trenchcoat.

He reckons that he's the one who foiled the agents of M.A.D. and the evil Doctor Claw — but generally it's the fast-thinking French Penny and the wonder dog Blammy who really crack the case.

Gadget first appeared on French TV, where his adventures can be seen six days a week. The inspector has become just as popular in this country and in other big thing countries like the USA and Australia.

But what about the game? Well, the Australian Beam Software team have successfully captured the spirit of the cartoon via Beam's new graphics system, proving that the Gadget character is the biggest you've ever seen on screen anywhere in the history of the video.

The plot of Inspector Gadget and the Circles of Fear is pretty simple. M.A.D. agents have planted bombs all over a city's big top. Gadget has to get in there before they explode.

The road to the circus is paved with dangers. Obstacles like boulders, ponds, slippery patches, snakes, guns, man-eating plants, small gnomes, heads which appear out of the ground to grab Gadget's sweater-tails, bouncers who throw impossible-to-destroy bubbles, bumpy traps, doors which only open by connecting to another level, telephones which tap you back again, most gnomes, color magic wands and of course gnomes. No wonder Gadget looks a bit bewildered by all this.

The good news is that Gadget can pick up the usual gadget-tricks the way. Like his over-socket Gadget-shoes, Gadget-croquet, Gadget-elastic legs, Gadget-hammer and many more extremely weird add-ons made famous by the TV cartoon.

The game is divided into three worlds — the first is really a training mode where you can get to grips with the Gadget and learn how to deal with the obstacles you encounter. On later levels there are more hazards and bombs to defuse.

The game is based on movement. Much Gadget is his slips and slides across a slippery patch — a truly amusing bit of animation too.

Gadget also has speech bubbles which appear at difficult points of the game.

GADGET

He shouts "Go Gadget!" at you, get him stuck, —"Aaaa!" at the traps over a hazard, and —"Geeeee!" when his leaps make an amazing spring loaded Gadget logo. Monstrous! What does that mean? He's on a postcard please!

It's the intention to draw that's been put into the graphics and animation that really make this game.

The graphics are big and colourful and capture faithfully the style of the original cartoon. The animation likewise Gadget bounces along nicely and his leaps would please Torville and Dean!

Inspector Gadget and the Circuit of Five is fast and fun to play.

If you're missing the French Connection — who should be back on your screens soon by the way — what better way to fill in the time until he returns than by playing the game.

There are 62 episodes of Gadget made for TV. We may not have quite as many computer games based on the cute anthropomorphic Eek!-bats as C+VID — we reckon that you'll be shouting for at least one more!

●Inspector Gadget will be available shortly on the 64 at £9.95 (114.00 abv) and Spectrum at £9.95

The Go Gadget serial has you read for the second season of a pair of punning Gadget-robot stars if you can solve the oh-so-very difficult C+VID Gadget Mystery Game! These wonderful things at Multimedia Systems has persuaded the Inspector to part with a pair of his special tapes and donate them to the winner of the delightfully tough competition. All you need right, all corners up will get a copy of the game, complete production, the 64 and Spectrum. So what are you waiting for! Get your tapes on and read this season which is just begging to be filled in. Come you're doing that! Look! Look! Computer! — Peter Gorton, the with Gadget Competition, Entry form, 20-22 Harrington Lane, London E11 1H (243). Manual C+VID competition rules apply and the closing date is April 1986. Note for the questions, set of scores by Penny and David.

MAKING TRACKS

What do you need for a successful megagame? Most people would say they needed two — score, model — soldiers. And if the game made it too big for that, you need a forest, with places of hardship representing forests and thousands of troops.

Of course, you need rules, often very complicated rules, to make your models behave as if they were real human beings. But have you ever tried to play a megagame with no rules at all, just with the human beings themselves?

Take teams of two or three players representing the controlling staff of an Army. Place them in a room, with a map, and off from everybody else. Let them write orders for their own troops and receive communications from higher headquarters and other commanders. If you have 40 people or so on each side working like that, with about 40 armies to coordinate the work between them, you have a megagame.

The megagame of August 1914 took place last November, and was one of a long series organized or supervised by military historian Dr Paddy Quinn.

Each game is usually played only once, and is no small commitment, taking typically a year to research and organize, and a day to play.

This time the game featured the great offensives along the Franco-German border in the first months of World War One. Six German armies (some of two players each for a commander and a staff of staff) led by the great German General Staff under von Moltke (five players) faced five French armies under General Joffre (with the same organization) plus the day but powerful British Expeditionary Force and the Belgian Army on the French left wing.

What are the vital ingredients of mega wargames. Model soldiers, no rules, up to 70 people and a good lunch afterwards. C + VG's Steve Badgley reports from the frontline of August 1914 where six German armies face five French armies. would history be re-written?

Megagames usually involved from 40 to 70 people, which means they take up a lot of space. As small games can be run in a private house, but a staff of some kind with several small rooms is ideal. One of the best features of August 1914 was the way in which players were to share orders rather than going off on their own. They were also very good at a mental skill in this kind of wargame, marking maps accurately. Two neighbouring forces having totally different ideas of where their own troops are, not to mention the enemy, has produced more than one military disaster.

The Commande-in-Chief needs to get out from his own headquarters as often as possible to visit subordinates and make sure that they all agree on what is happening (in gets to be fun when what they have all agreed turns out to be wrong anyway).

The big problem for the French in 1914 was that driving anywhere left you completely out of touch with everything else, and that the British, in what turned out to be the crucial position, not only didn't speak French very well but weren't actually under French command.

It is very important, once the basic problems of how to run a megagame have been solved (think of it as a seven-hour, 40-a-side obstacle race) for the umpire to give the players the right atmosphere for the game. Otherwise they just send messages in, get them out again, and it feels no different whether they are German generals in 1914 or French admirals in 1995.

Good creation actually needs a separate set of umpires whose job is nothing else than to make the game feel realistic.

The final aspect of any megagame is the detail at the end, to which the players and umpires gather together to discuss the game and try to unravel what really happened. Sometimes they can't agree, which is perfectly normal. It is not unusual for people to disagree to what happened after real battles as well.

Two years ago I won a Penetration War battle as Wellington, and my subordinates and I still disagree as to how we did it (readily it was all in my master plan, and that's just because...).

In the event, the megagame of August 1914 turned out surprisingly like the real thing. The British on the left flank showed less willingness to fight than their historical counterparts, and as an atmosphere umpire I had to please them a few times, representing Lord Kitchener, to remind them of their duty.

Although, the British commander did have a perfectly good reason for his behaviour: he'd put it in the detail, "we were scared of the Germans". A rather wide gap opened up between British and French commanders (the German wing west of Paris was checked).

The game ended with the Germans having got a bit further forward than they managed historically, but still having forced its retreat. It was a very impressive game. And we had some good lunches.

C-VG MONSTER COMPETITION

Who believes in the Loch Ness Monster? Well, if you do then this is the chance of a lifetime — to go and take part in an expedition to seek out the the Deep monster himself by winning this Terror of the Loch competition.

All you have to do is send in your drawing or painting of Nessie and hope you will be one of the lucky winners. That's right, one of them. Due to the amazing generosity of Microsoft, those lucky winners will be able to spend a weekend at the Loch Ness Centre, Drumnadrochit, Inverness-shire.

The weekend starts on Friday with everyone travelling up to Inverness. On the Saturday a bus trip around the Loch and a visit to the Loch Ness Monster Exhibition have been lined up. On Sunday — the highlight of the whole weekend — Microsoft has arranged for YOU to actually go out on the expedition boat the Ness Atlantic while she does a sonar search of the Loch for Nessie.

Can you imagine that if we locate her? Our guide will be Adrian Smith, who is Director of the project and an expert on Nessie. On Monday we all travel home — and don't worry about missing school that day (as if you would) because it's a bank holiday. The weekend has been arranged for 3rd-4th May, so, check with your parents that they are not planning on taking you somewhere that weekend. And if that isn't enough, you will also receive a copy of the game Terror of the Deep from Microsoft and a copy of the board game Nessie Hunt by Searchlight.

Six runners-up will also receive the game and the board game.

So what are you waiting for? Get those pens, paints and crayons out and start working. But, please don't just put three bumps in the middle of some blue water. Let your imagination go wild, it'll be worth it! Remember to attach your entry form securely to your entry.

I.D.E.A.S CENTRAL

Hi there, how're things? This has been one busy month at I.D.E.A.S Central — getting things organised for the Golden Joystick Awards and going along to the Play-By-Mail convention. It was nice meeting all our readers who turned up and especially a certain journalist from Crash — who should dispel the rumour that there is no Melissa R. Don't forget to keep sending your tips, pokes, maps etc to me.

MSX/ORIC

Although we are not getting a steady flow of MSX games to review in the office, we are getting a steady flow of hints and tips from our readers — here it goes:

One of those readers is Graham Pole of Manxpress, who followed our tip for Barbarians (February issue) and then found that on the second stage near to the end, there is a loop of rock at the bottom.

Shoot away debris and go into this loop. You will now be transported to the first bonus stage. Couple this with the second bonus stage and you will have about 26 lives.

Nightmare — there are secret exits in this game to higher levels. The first of these is below the first river on the far left hand side — this takes you to level two. The second is after the third river on the far right — to take you to level three. Touch a power slab (will do you as a power crystal appears. This will provide two power crystals, one during the pause or done straight after.

Moonrider — if you press all left hand keys, you will be put into cheat mode. You can gain points without being killed.

Another tip for the MSX, come from Martin Green of London. First up is Track and Field Two — for those of you who have been having problems clearing heights of 2.40 metres upwards, here is a way to clear any height at all the time.

When the game sounds for you to start your run-up press the right cursor or move the joystick right once and you will see your speed go up about 300 — wait a second then do it once more then jump when you are just by the mat.

If you have to touch speed your legs will knock the bar off to little and you will land on the ground but if you do it just right you will land on the mat and the computer will think you have cleared the height.

Here Martin lists the 12 Teleport codes for Sierakuin, but, would like to know if there are any more: Kanaka, Angor, Enori, Amia, Vora, Zodia, Krump, Dulan, Indis, Ulpas, Argol, and Snool.

Objects — The Access card will open all security doors and Cheops Pyramids. The key will remove all Barriers. Joystick gives you an extra Blob.

Death — Floor creatures, UFOs, Spikes and Eggplants will kill on contact. Generators and some barriers will only kill if there is an electrical charge flowing through them.

Pyramids — on gaining access to a pyramid you will notice that some objects are white. This means that you are either carrying it or it is somewhere about the game. don't bother exchanging for those items unless it is really necessary. On leaving a pyramid you will notice that it disappears — use pyramids wisely.

Here's one to prove that C+MSX can't turn their backs on the less well known computers — a few tips for the Orion.

Keith Thompson of Surrey is the man responsible for these cheat modes.

Jonson's Revenge — if you only have the one life left, choose the Space Mission on this screen and shoot as many alien craft as possible and try to avoid bumping into the indestructible Gubcoits.

When you have destroyed a predetermined number of them you will see the Freighter come across the screen — you must shoot the Freighter and at the same time bow yourself up on a Gubcoit or on the alien craft's fire. Now look at how many times you have left it should display a cyph square with various keyboard symbols — you now have infinite lives.

The second tip is for The Helion and this method will allow you to begin at any screen level up to 100. Follow these steps. Press fire, Press CTRL, and DEL together. The enter code should now appear on the screen. Press B, Press I, Press O, Press Shift and together Press Del.

The Demo screen should now be running. Press C as normal to start and you will be on level 95.

If you substitute another at step seven, the game will start at the level of the ASCII code of that letter eg A=65.

A couple of issues back Mark McGuinness needed help with Dragon in Lair. Mark Archer wrote in with these tips.

Second level — when the skulls bounce towards you, push up on the joystick. Press fire to smash the hand.

Push up again to dodge some more skulls and then fire to smash the hand.

Another hand will try to grab you from the left, so push left on the joystick and press fire to swing your sword.

Here, courtesy of the man who brought you the map of Dandy, is his latest masterpiece — Gaudin. Thanks also to the tip, Denny Blackman.

On the CBM64 version. This is about the best all rounder — as always choose here. Go through all the levels so you can get the real picture out of your game. Whenever you go always shoot the generators first — this prevents them from releasing any nasties.

Try not to use all of your potions too quickly and don't use them to kill Dandy. If you run out run him and the gap is big enough, cut him the Fland. If you don't think you can complete a level and you have only got about 250 energy left, just wait for about 40 seconds and everything apart from the generators, treasure and monsters will disappear and turn into exits.

But if it's just a pity you lack them just wait for about 20 secs and all doors will disappear.

CBM 64 • CBM 64

Ar'n Swen has sent a few hints for some of his Commodore 64 games: Sanction — on most levels, more points can be scored by going slowly than by going at the maximum speed. Forget about the boxes.

Paradox — at the start of the game, walk into the nearest hanger and collect the scientist. Return to the ship and then again leave again and return to the hanger. On returning there will be another scientist. Collect his card and use it with the computer to get some cash. Repeat as necessary. Bonus packs are needed.

COMMODORE

A quick cheat from Stephen McLaughlin of Glasgow for Pung Fu Master. Simply press shift and G and you will get a gun but only when the figure are moving is facing left and only when he is standing still. Stephen would like someone to help him break Hambo.

Someone else who wants help is Philip Malone in Sunderland. His problem is with Green Devil which he has been playing for three months and still cannot get past the seventh stage. Who has some pointers for endless lives for the CBM64 that does not need Biologic Expert Cartridge?

★ Stephen McLaughlin

W.J. Spanner has found a cheat in Superior Software's Space Pilot and here it is. When playing the game you hold down the Caps Lock and the keys and press Escape. This enables you to jump into the next screen at any time. Simple isn't it?

Here we have P. Linnams of High Wycombe with a bug he found in US Gold's Gaudin — but, he warned, it will only work on a two-player game.

★ P. Linnams

Select your character and load as normal, but, when the player's health runs out don't bother about entering his initials — just press the space bar. You will now see the flashing Gaudin sign. The player who has been killed must press his fire button and when he has done this his character will re-appear with 2500 health points.

Derek Clements and Steven Gardner of Fife have also found a bug on Gaudin for the Spectrum. This time you have to hold down the Symbol Shift and hit with Enter (or Shift and Enter) and you are able to go through all the walls and also go off one side of the screen and come on the other. You have to keep your finger on the buttons to keep going through the walls, so Derek and Steven recommend that you put something on the buttons to weigh them down.

Jon Chisholm of Leeds would like someone to help him with a cheat of Jet Set Willy II for the Acorn Electron he received at Christmas.

WIN THE WORLD'S FIRST SEGA SYSTEM

Just take a look at this fabulous Sega Master System. Dreams are made of this. How can you make your dreams come true by becoming the proud owner of such a system plus two game cartridges? Just thank your lucky stars you bought this copy of Computer + Video Games and read on.

The following characteristics are thought to represent the best features of a dedicated game console. Use your skill to place each of the features in order of importance to you, as a potential buyer.

For example, if you think an Optional Keyboard is the most important feature, write 5 in the box next to the line First Most Important Feature.

Then in each of the remaining boxes, write the number which corresponds, in your view, to the second most important feature, third most important feature and so on.

► GIGAS

Following the success of Taito's Delicious — a Break-Character — another very similar game has entered the arcade: Bomb on Delicious, a mild variation on the same genre. If it wasn't for the slightly different presentation, Gigas might even be called Delicious.

Gigas is again played in exactly the same manner as Delicious and to me, it must have isn't a long change between them. Just require spin and positioning and you're off.

For those of you who haven't played Delicious, you have to move a platform from one side of the screen to the other and depending on enemy ball orbits will hit back above you. Images are actually in the final stages of releasing the official version of the game but Quintus Graphics looked looks like money and there is the good in the extensive rule book and perhaps cheat manuals.

In early levels, the balls will disappear, as soon as the ball touches them, and the ball is pretty easy to destroy. On the first level of Gigas, there are a couple of special coloured balls which need to be hit more than once before they disappear, but there's no real difficulty at this stage.

There is the added problem of a poisonous green ball which is one of the wall. It's really difficult to aim at you but there are really no problems.

So you go for the additional bonuses as a challenge towards the end. The way to kill the monster is to hit inside the enemy ball, or remove the head and it's a very difficult to aim. As the ball hits the back it shoots off corners, the side of the screen and onto your platform. If you can position in time, and then hit the corner bouncing back. During the ball's journey it can possibly disappear a extremely difficult and depends on the speed, angle and time when it hits the platform.

The game play especially difficult when there are only one or two bricks left which require several direct hits to make them disappear. With only the walls to rebound off you can't guarantee what direction the ball is going to turn.

There's also the added bonus of placing your platform in the right place to catch the ball. Two other you'll notice it across the screen, monitor the distance and the ball will tell you. Once the ball is in you're only got three tries and this is a very difficult game. I can guarantee you'll be heading money into the machine like there's no tomorrow.

As in Delicious, when you hit enemy balls letters drop down, like Delicious, give you various points like an extended platform slowing the game down and so on. It's very tempting to go after the letters, catch them, and find you've missed the ball. Another like too.

The only time I caught any letters where where they fall or even be the same place as the ball, which for me must, must be too much effort. If you can spot that you can catch both, but the extremely sensitive controls beg to be under total control.

The joystick is a little which is hard to hold, not too large and clunking directions to control the platform. The main work is a hand to send the platform across, however to get a small board, at best the small degree of movement necessary to place the platform in the right position. Difficult to get the ball off, it's very easy to get into the amount of time that is needed.

A continuous play facility is available, and without this I don't think I'd have got anywhere in the game. Getting into your level but a game over once again, however the ball will need several hits to make them disappear, there are more taking money which need to be dealt with and the wall structures become more complex.

This machine is a welcome change from the shoot videos and a really addictive game. I loved it.

► BERMUDA TRIANGLE

There's one thing about Bermuda Triangle which is a pretty obvious statement that a you don't ever disappear.

Bermuda Triangle has 500 is a space shoot 'em up involving you and your partner — if you're using the two player option — against swarms of enemy fighters. One of the most noticeable features of the game are the extra large and colorful sprites which combine them to take over the screen. At least you can see what your ship looks like and a nice one can be seen mounted on top, even taking them out the side, which makes it change from many games where you control a minute piece of ship. I must agree from the old

As first against the game looks nice, but this is a very much a late impression. At all times the odds are overwhelmingly against you and the only way to survive is to get extra fire power from the enemy, make sure you don't fly out of fuel and to fire the ship on unintelligible pattern since they fly to.

You have to fly your ship the specially crafted screen, leaving the enemy and changing the fire power as they move closer towards you. The only additional protection offered are the occasional shield and extra energy, which position themselves around your wings. You can either fly over them to pick them up or blast an enemy fighter and pick up only that wings protecting his.

attempts. A push of a button will rearrange these lights for maximum protection—or other grouped around the nose of your craft, around the wing tips or at the rear for your tailguards.

As you slice over the landscape, try to score over the lights. To which bump up your rank. There are many a stage ahead and you shouldn't find it too difficult. Your tailwings just forward are a nice maneuver which allows you to forward or a relatively safe path while locating the enemy as they pop up one by one.

Keep to when you'll come across strings of mines going across your path, which are almost impossible to destroy. The only way out these mines is to go through them, dodging your craft as much as you can. You die a few seconds later. When this mine is always on as you fly across, totally blocking your way, the only possible thing to do is a large maneuver. This forces you to move sideways and the enemy starts in the opposite direction for awhile. The mines then disappear and you can continue forward.

As you fly deeper into enemy territory, the number of enemy increases. This means that you'll soon have two or three ships are not flying close towards you, each matching your ship on size and strength. Instead of the single one with the force of the lightning. The force becomes massive, your trigger finger is uncomfortable toward ships are needed to destroy each other, and at the same time your wings can your own and dodge enemy fire on colliding.

Remember, though, not the last of them! You've got the craft with the speediest, fast if tricky, dodging and the controlling skills and a considerable to the game play.

▲ LEGENDARY WINGS

Another well-remembered title the name for Capcom's latest offering, Legendary Wings, which sets you and your police partners of the future scene. This futuristic kind of the world setting must happen deep into a machine and I'm continuously surprised to find I do a welcome back years ago.

So, you get a great ship, you don't shoot which isn't a bad as long as it's new. It's not the most colorful game ever but it's really a lot and today to make you want to continue playing. The idea is to form "LAME" in a supercomputer which is a mission for you to do with the aim you take out on the wings of Lame and Capcom's game is really fun. God of War, almost around the year average 2013 and about "up, up, up, up."

The ship wings flying while you set off over to form, but not a mission or mission is a reassembling long dead bodies with hands that usually can't follow your progress. And in direct control of the process, with the aim of the ship, which is a mission to the top of the screen. Now it's the time for action. If you can't shoot in a single the right place, you can knock off all the planets of this world down in low formation before they start forming a circle pattern which are almost impossible to destroy. If you do it right, you can hit from left to right of the screen taking the enemy's ships, then the enemy's ships. At this point, dodging from the left is a simple.

As you go into a vertically scrolling screen you'll come across the right hand in front with a light green missile which you'll be rolled into if you get too close. My point on the outside of the screen, and it's worth it, you don't want you that this incoming enemy are a new level which you'll come across in all of the world and also for the most part, but.

Every time you can avoid throughout the game, if you know what to do and a lot of it, you'll stay on the ground, but if you don't know what you're doing, you'll be instantly going to a volcano edge over the enemy.

You're given a choice of direction when you get to the volcano base—either forward to meet more hands of dodging.

ships, or a different to a horizontally scrolling screen, which is the mission. Let yourself get rolled into the new mine and you'll find yourself in a different world, complex inside a mine. Your wings are on the ground at the point and the earth change to allow you to jump and fire.

There is one amazing inconsistency in this two player game. The brochure and artwork give the impression that the two bodies follow one another and travel. In reality, it's a different body and points changed fast. So what is the story, with a name like Michael Flier in Kami Walker which the instructions use on the screen of Asa Legendary Wings.

MAIL

Right, let's start the ball rolling as I've a lot to get through this month and very little space to do it in. I have three offers to tempt you with and a review of a new fantasy P.B.M. called A-Z's which in time is possibly the best fantasy P.B.M. game in the market as I write. By the way, I'm Wayne, chairman of the Play-By-Mail Players Association!!

There is a new single character fantasy game going to be launched onto the P.B.M. market in the not-too-distant future called Pungra, which by all accounts, is going to be a household name shortly. I must come clean and confess that I have not played the game personally (Only the lack of time to do so prevents me), but I have seen the rulebooks plus various turns received by friends of mine and both are of a very high quality indeed.

You can play any character from an Assassin to an Elementalist and become any race from a Hill Tall Kind, including clerics to a Wizard.

The magic system looks extremely interesting. These are four styles of magic and anyone can try to cast a spell from a kindly peasant to a noble of the highest court! However, what happens when you try is anyone's guess.

They went on the P.B.M. grapevine is that once this game is released it will take off in a big way!

At the present time the game is still in the playtest stage and after entering high level negotiations with G.M.A. I have arranged for ten C+VG readers to playtest this game. This means that you will receive the rulebooks, start up forms and new letters for NOTHING.

Furthermore, you can play Pungra ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE and it is released on a commercial basis.

If you decide to play the game when it is released, you will have at least ten rounds advantage over the players who join after you. Think of all that power! All you have to do is write into me and tell me who your most favourite fantasy hero is and why. Nothing could be simpler.

If you win a playtest position, you will be expected to play the game to the full and report back to me when the playtest is over.

Marks and Males is a postal representation of the Napoleonic Wars in Northern Central Europe between the period 1804-1809.

Historical Engineering, the company who run this game, are well known in the P.B.M. circles as their presentation is excellent and their games are very well detailed and precise.

Marks and Males enables you to take over control of the four major countries that were involved in this European conflict (Russia, France, Prussia or the Hapsburg Empire) and you should use your wargaming skill to eventually dominate and defeat the other players. How you do this is up to you.

The rulebook alone is probably one of the most impressive I have seen. It is 64 pages long, easy to read and explains complex rules with a welcome clarity. If you like to play over the table here to face Napoleonic wargames (or any wargames for that matter), but don't have the time or the patience, then this game is the one for you.

Once again, I have been in contact with the Directors of Historical Engineering and they have offered four C+VG readers the opportunity to play test their game. ABSOLUTELY FREE! This is no mean offer as the start up fee and rulebook in Marks and Males usually £7.00 and further turns (one every 14 days) can be anything between £14.00 — £11.00 per turn. So no game can last anything up to two years, a playtest in this game will be a big money saver indeed.

Player ON THE MARCH Keith Maskey has chosen to become one of the four players of this game, so there are now three playtest positions open.

All you have to do to obtain this position is again write to me stating the full name of the leader of the Prussian forces which took part in the Napoleonic war. Once you have obtained the playtest position you will have to keep me up to date with any feelings or comments you have about the game by sending me regular monthly reports. Please bear in mind that this game could take two years to complete, so only serious, experienced, P.B.M. and wargamers should apply.

Further into Fantasy was recently launched on the market by a company called The Laboratory. I am currently playing this game and I am pleased to report that I am enjoying every minute of it.

Once again you play a single character, but although this game is semi-fantasy orientated, I get the feeling that there is an as yet undiscovered witch element about it.

You are limited to three character classes, which are all human — A priest, a warrior or a sage. Once you have decided what you want to be, you then allocate your pool of 15 points on various abilities, e.g. intellect, killer instinct, survival etc.

However you just can't allocate points on your abilities constantly as you will find that when you come to choose skills such as magical skill and magic skill you will be sadly lacking in either one or the other.

If you wish you can either worship one of the 12 supposed gods straight away or practice atheism. Once you have created your character you send off your start up form and you receive a nice yellow, fully detailed, printed character form for your retention and loads of other blumph, then off you go!

The first thing that attracted me to this game, like Marks and Males was the exceptional rule book and three newsletters. It is not only packed out with clear, concise rules but it also contains great artwork, poems and, most importantly, descriptions of dreams that you have had.

PLAY BY

If you read between the lines and interpret the dreams correctly, you can learn a lot about the planet's history and its future. It is important that you analyze the dreams sections before you create your character so you may well find something that may well change your mind when creating it.

The first newsletter, aptly named What's Shining, is in the same vein as the rulebook and it would appear that a lot of work has gone into it.

For a company that has never organized a P.B.M. game before, The Laboratory has impressed me. If I had to put my finger on the point about this company that impressed me the most (apart of the rulebooks aside), I must plump for their forethought.

They have realized that the P.B.M. community is a close knit one, so they have expanded their game to include Fantasy gamebooks, in which they send you a continuous adventure type book which you can play in the comfort of your own home and it links in with the rest of the game.

Well, once again, I have arranged for ten C+VG readers to start up in this game and play for ten turns for nothing. So the first ten people to write into me stating the full names of any three of King Henry VIII's wives get to play for free! So get writing.

I was privileged to get asked to play in the planned version of A.K.'s in the summer of last year. I remember to this day the fear I felt when a large envelope crashed through my letterbox and hit the door mat with a loud thud, making me jump out of bed. I gingerly opened it and extracted the contents from inside. An A.K.'s Basic book was all that it contained. I made myself a large cup of coffee and settled back to read this mighty tome with some trepidation.

You can, therefore, imagine my relief when I found that the rulebook, despite its volume, was one of the best reads I have had for a long time.

Written in plain, but very readable, English it satisfied me with a pleasant ease about the fictional world of the A.K.'s.

As a matter of fact the rule book took me 30 minutes to read and was well worth it. It took me a further 45 minutes to create my character, but when I did I had something that I could really relate to.

Then it was time to complete my first round. You get masses of maps and info to start you off and once more the scope was terrific.

I opted to try to join a guild, listen to rumors and explore the city that I started off in: all in all a pretty heavily roleplayed, but standard first turn. You can therefore imagine my delight when I received two full scap-pages of G.M.'s replies, written lightly in a exciting, descriptive style.

The A.K.'s track me as a P.B.M. game that wants to mould its self around you and not vice versa.

For example, you can have three types of G.M.'s reply, at a price and style that suits you, as shown below—

Basically Described (£1.50)—This gives you the basic outlines of what your character sees and actually does.

Partly Described (£1.75)—More descriptive than the Basically described text with elaborated and more reader's text.

Storily Described (£2.00)—Self-explanatory really. It is written as if you are reading your favourite fantasy book.

Furthermore, the game has 12 levels that your character can progress upwards through and you do this by earning experience points.

All this plus well produced newsletters, detailed adventures and action packed G.M.'s replies make the game one of, if not THE, top in it's field. If I have to level one piece of criticism at the game, it is that the G.M. tries too hard to please you and at times you are left wondering how some last adventure in a creepy dungeon can be bettered!

You don't have to take my word for it however, you can join in and play the game yourself. Start up in the game costs £6.00 and you get two free turns (plus an extra one if you mention C+VG). All cheques/P.O.s should be made payable to Legend Incorporated and sent to C+VG. This is because of yet another one of Wagner's wonderful offers—the first ten letters sent to C+VG applying to play the A.K.'s will have their cheques/P.O.s returned to them and their start up will be absolutely free.

If any of you can spare some P.B.M. problems or enquiries, just drop me a line, as this is what I'm here for. . .

VO's Golden Joystick awards for 1995 had the top people from the British computer games industry flocking to London.

And in keeping with C+VO's tradition of holding the ceremony at an unusual venue — last year it was on a Thames rivership — this year we enlisted the help of the army.

Amid tight security — the joysticks are worth a fair amount of money — we took over Cadogan Hall at the Duke of York's barracks in the Kings Road.

And so, before you ask, it wasn't Prince Andrew who presented the joysticks but Joshi Hoffman, presenter of the television rock show The Tube and the pianist with Squeeze. In fact, it's the third time he's handed out the awards.

Champagne, wine, a marvelous meal and then a visit to the Limelight, one of London's newest nightclubs put the seal on a great day for everybody.

As you know, the Golden Joystick goes to the people and games you voted for. And that means these awards mean more to the software houses because you're the people that matter.

This year there were eight categories, each having a winner, runner-up and commended. The full results are printed opposite in C+VO's Ball of Honor.

UK Gold captured the top award of Game of the Year with Counter-Strike was Software House of the Year and Andrew Braybrook was Programmer of the Year. The Pawn captured the award for Adventure of the Year, Vietnam was Strategy Game of the Year, Golden was Arcade-style Game of the Year, Best Original Game was Firebird's Central, for the first time was a Golden Joystick awarded for the Best Soundtrack. The winner was Rob Hubbard for Nemesis.

C+VG STREET SCEN

Handle these pages with care. The information they contain is so hot you could burn your fingers. What have we got? Only the return of Ultimate (again) with Marlinoids, another Monkey game (big it), CRI, smarter up its image (hey), Ariolasoft's in a scrap with Daglight (heavy) and Firebird's using its imagination (wow).

Star Star, CRI's fast and furious shoot-'em-up for the Atari, is now set for release on the IBM PC.

You play the part of a pilot of the space craft Star Star. You are destined for the Xanadu Star Corporation's solar energy grid to collect energy. Due to a build-up of unstable energy pulses, that task is far from easy.

You must hustle around the maze-like grid at headneck speed destroying disruptive pulses to collect the fast moving energy crystals that are left behind. You must avoid the grid walls and disruptive pulses as you will be destroyed.

The price of Star Star is as yet undetermined.

In all of the current American Football games you simply get to play the coach. Now thanks to Golem and Adrian, you can get down among the action on the field. So prepare to find yourself here to face with the Prodigy or running for their game winning touchdowns. At last a true athlete version of the US sport we've all come to love is made. GRI, Championship Football will be available for the C64 (1.95 nov), C89 (nov) and MSX (1.95 nov). C64 nov. C89 nov. MSX 1.95 nov. C64 for it.

Marlinoids is set to release Polaroid, a multi-mouse shoot-'em-up with a challenging puzzle, for the Spectrum, Amstrad, Commodore 64/128 and MSX.

The game offers five game levels, each consisting of 48 rooms. On each level is a "Pulse" who has to be rescued. This is done by finding the key which unlocks the door to the prison.

The alien on each level becomes progressively more intelligent and will deplete your power if they touch you. The landscape of each level also becomes increasingly more difficult and hazardous to negotiate.

The game is far more complex than simply finding your way through a maze. Various pathways are blocked by gates, of which there are six types, numbered one to six. The gates can be opened or closed by passing over sensors. The sensors are also labelled one to six.

If a particular type of gate is closed and you pass over its associated sensor then it will open. If a gate is open and you pass over its sensor it will close. It is this element of the game which makes it far more exciting than simply solving a maze.

Polaroid will sell for £7.95 on the Spectrum and £8.95 for the Commodore, Amstrad and MSX. Commodore disk versions will cost £12.95 and Amstrad disk for £14.95.

It can't be that it is! A game from Ultimate in case you've forgotten, Ultimate were once regarded as THE games people. Since they were swallowed up by the U.S. Gold title has been feared from the original Ultimate crew — until now Marlinoids are on the way.

A vast robot ship has been launched into outer space by the Marlin Kingdom to find out the forces and gather knowledge of the galaxy. Installed on this ship is the largest and most powerful computer the Marlinoids have ever created. You are the guardian of this advanced computer named The Brain of Marlin and it is your ultimate mission to defend, maintain and activate the Brain in the attack by Aliens. The Marlinoids are such vicious and barbaric enemies who enter your ship, disrupting the passage of programs transmitted through the Brain draining your battery in desperate suicidal attacks to destroy you and your ship. Your task is to guide the program from the transmitter in the reactor in each sector, avoiding the disposal chutes which may lose your program and repairing any damage and active components. To defend yourself you are equipped with powerful lasers. A console acts as your aid displaying a map which shows your position, the position of the program, the status of each sector and messages to update you of the activities within the Brain. Available for the Spectrum at a recommended retail price of £8.95, Amstrad and MSX at £6.99 Cassette from April 1987.

The Image System, new computer graphics package is being released by CRI. In addition to providing the usual drawing and painting facilities, it allows you to create your own text fonts. Zoom, move, copy, scale, rotate and even hold your pictures in 3D space.

The Image System will retail for £19.95 on cassette and £24.95 on disc.

Ariolasoft plans an interesting twist on the space shoot-'em-up with Daglight 2187. The screen is split in two, representing the view from two different craft, yours and the enemy. So you have to keep your eye on both screens to cope with the action. It's one or two people against the computer or human versus human. Three dimension vector graphics and the promise of very fast action should make Daglight a gothic. Out first on the Commodore 64.

How many stars are there in the universal Difficult, eh? Well that's your mission in Imagination, a graphics/text adventure from Firebird. The game begins with you sitting in your living room with a computer and floppy disk and a choice of four games to play, all of which are linked. Imagination is from the mind of Peter Torrence, creator of Subnautic and Seabase Delta.

The Mighty Mole is back! After a world tour old Monty is about to return to your screens in Ad! Wiedersehen Monty from Grevlin. More platform antics from Mr Mole but this time set in exotic locations all around the globe. Our screen pics show Paris and Sweden. The idea of the game is to help Monty raise enough cash to buy his dream mixed Molar — shown at the bottom of the screen. This latest — and last? — addition to the Monty epic is going to be a must for platform freaks. Watch for C+VG's full review coming to a magazine near you soon. And while you're chewing your nails waiting for that, why don't you enter our Monty Mole joke competition on page 40 of this month's issue.

Welcome to the clone zone or, as *Amiga*sch prefers, Challenge of the GoBots on the Klugeon Steps. The computer game based on Hanna-Barbera's hugely successful cartoon series should be out in May. It revolves around the plight of the genely GoBot Scooter which has been cloned. There seems to be hundreds of him all over the Moobies strip. Not a good state of affairs. The mission is to find and collect all the Scooter clones and bomb away bases. The plot of the game is by Tony Criveller and included on one side of the tape is a GoBot story vital to the playing of the game.

OTTIS here again. Yes it's time again that I put my stamp on Mailbag. Okay, the others do a good job but you must admit nobody does it better than me. Agree? No? Who cares anyway. My ego circuits are big enough for all of us.

■ I got some pretty good results and think it is great. One of the best things was the response. A few months ago I read a review about an adventure called Disciple by CBI. I started a new challenge instead of just another about 100,000, to be so sure as the game came into the local computer shop I bought it. I believe in your review you said these were fun for adults but it still wasn't a true mission job. You were looking to work over two days and a stroke of luck to complete the last level. But it was worth while to get the satisfaction in completing it.

Well, once the next level is won, this I hoped was much easier to get into. I was going great until I got into Enryale's personal realm, where I kept trying to die. I've tried everything but to no avail, it had me stumped, as it has in my friends' and still after three months we've almost lost the solution. So, I was wondering if someone can help me solve it. I'd appreciate it.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of older adults. The study was conducted in a community-based setting. The participants were 60 older adults (mean age = 72.5 years) who were recruited from a local senior center. The participants were divided into two groups: a control group and an intervention group. The control group did not participate in the walking program, while the intervention group participated in the walking program. The walking program consisted of walking for 30 minutes, three times a week, at a pace of 2.5 miles per hour. The participants in the intervention group were also provided with a pedometer to monitor their walking distance. The study was conducted over a 12-week period. The participants in the intervention group showed significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The improvements were measured using a series of physical and psychological health questionnaires. The physical health questionnaires included measures of walking speed, walking distance, and walking time. The psychological health questionnaires included measures of depression, anxiety, and overall health. The results of the study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults.

I can jump like a flea and even glide but Heels is the Daley Thompson of the two of us - he's FAST! Together, we can find each other, we really do make an awesome team, and that's the only way we can overcome the sinister Blackmoor. The last time we entered Castle Blackmoor we found the coveys of THREE of the repressed kingdoms but by that time I'd run out of doughnut ammunition and my buddy was lost somewhere in the Salted world - it was the closest we had come to defeating that speculation - we were jumping for joy, splitting our sides, dying with laughter... we were Head over Heels!

Is this but I don't think my flur frosted my pal Mr. Heels I'd get nowhere
