

Dear Beamrider,

There it was: a shimmering grid of deep blue beams. A legion of radiant enemy starships. A solitary light warrior. The promise of a dazzling duel...more fun and challenging than the average player could imagine. And maybe at first it seemed like enough. It would be.... for that average player.

But then there's a few like you.

As you moved through the hyperspace door into that first light sector, and the sound warped to that ominous crescendo, well, you probably knew already.

That you had found your game. That perhaps you were more than just the average player. That Sector 20 and more than 60,000 points loomed just over the next other-dimensional horizon.

Congratulations. Looks like you were right.

Enclosed is your patch, Beamrider. Put it on your lightcraft. And get back out that hyperspace door. Because in a universe of light, one stands alone.

Respectfully yours,

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Jan Marsella".

Jan Marsella
Keeper of the Light